BELFAST ARMS; FEARING HOME RULE RIOTING

BELFAST, Feb. 7.—With almost 5,000 troops on the scene to prevent rioting tomorrow during the great Home Rule demonstration which is to be addressed by Winston Churchill and John Redmond, this city took on an aspect of war today.

Although Lord Mayor Robert J. McMordie hoped that the presence of so large a body of soldiers would prevent bloodshed, a new element of danger has entered the situation in the shape of threats by the mill girls to prevent the meeting if possible.

Although the Ulster Unionists have given a half-hearted promise to make no attempt to break up the Home Rule meeting, the authorities did not relax their vigilance today nor lessen the preparations which are being made for tomorrow. In addition to the soldiers, hundreds of special deputies are being sworn in and special police will patrol the streets.

The trouble expected from the women is not taken as a demonstration against Home Rule, but an outbreak of turbulent natures that love violence and see an opportunity to gratify that extraordinary passion. According to the Lord Mayor the women know no fear and cannot be controlled. They precipitated two riots in Belfast in previous years which taxed the efforts of all the police in the city to quell.

KING FREDERICK OF DENMARK IS DYING

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Feb. 7.—King Frederick of Denmark, who was suddenly stricken yesterday while walking in the palace garden, was much worse to-day. Court physicians issued a bulletin saying that His Majesty was suffering from inflammation of the lungs, but held out hope for his recovery. Despite this reassurance fears are felt owing to the rapid course of the attack.

The court ball, which was set for next week, was cancelled today. This was taken as corroboration of the reports that Frederick is in most serious condition.

21 LOWELL STRIKERS HELD FOR TRESPASS

LOWELL, Feb. 7.—Twenty-one employes of the Lowell Bleadering Company out on strike for higher wages were arrested by Lowell and Billerica police near the works of the rendering company on the outskirts of the city here today and charged with trespassing. The plant of the company is in Billerica, just outside Lowell. The strikers were on the Boston & Maine tracks. No weapons were found. All the strikers were bailed. A hearing was set for Friday.

DIES FROM BURNS IN CAMBRIDGE FIRE

Miss Ella Jennings, twenty-nine years old, died at the Cambridge Relief Hospital today from the effects of burns received at a fire at No. 29 Burleigh street last night. Miss Grace Irwin, another woman who was taken to the hospital badly burned, is reported as improved.

WOMAN HELD UP IN KITCHEN AT LAWRENCE

LAWRENCE, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Eliza Roy was held up in her kitchen at No. 51 Water street today by a man who pointed a revolver at her and demanded food. Mrs. Roy escaped out the front door with her three young children and screamed for help. Soldiers came on the run, but the man fled out the back way, over a fence and escaped by way of Melrose and Oxford streets. Investigation showed that a few minutes before the hold-up a man answering the description of this one had applied for food at the strikers' soup kitchen in Franco-Belgian Hall, but was denied as he had not the three cents to pay for a bowl of soup and because the soup kitchen had closed for the morning.

Mrs. Roy's husband is a mill operative and is working. The Roys live in a ground-floor flat. A family named Murphy lives upstairs.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Mrs. Roy was in her kitchen with the children. The latter are: Archie, five years; Rosella, four, and Wilfred, one.

Drew a Revolver.

Mrs. Roy was busy at the wash boiler when the back door was opened suddenly. A strange man entered, having a revolver in his right hand. He was about twenty-five years old, five feet six inches tall, of swarthy complexion, with black moustache and wearing a small cap on his head. Mrs. Roy was too frightened to notice him beyond that.

"He want eats," said the man, raising his revolver. "Your man work. Can me get eats?"

Mrs. Roy opened the door into the next room and hurried her children through the doorway. Driving them along ahead of her the terrified mother ran through to the front room and then into the hall, expecting every second to be shot.

In the hall she met Mrs. Murphy coming down from the second floor in engrossing sentence Mrs. Roy gave Mrs. Murphy an idea of what had happened.

"Get the soldiers," said Mrs. Murphy promptly. With the children stumbling on ahead, the two women rushed out the front door and into the street, screaming stirtly.

Soldiers to the Rescue.

The Water street neighborhood was being patrolled by Company M of the Eighth Regiment from Somerville. This company is in command of Captain Wiley.

From either direction soldiers heard the screams and came on the run, seven in all.

"A man in the kitchen," cried Mrs. Roy. The little detachment, with bayonets ready, dashed into the house and to the kitchen. The man was gone. Neighbors said afterward they saw a man rush out the back door, through the yard, over the fence and away down Melrose and Oxford street. The soldiers scouted around the neighborhood for several minutes, but the man made good his escape.

Reassured by the militia, Mrs. Roy returned to the house with her children, but was prompted that extra watch would be kept at her home. News of the holdup alarmed all residents in the vicinity and every stranger was watched with care. Women locked the house doors and children were kept within.

MRS. RICHARD FITZGERALD MABEL GILLISPIE

MRS. SARAH CONBOY

Mrs. Richard Fitzgerald, on the left; Miss Mabel Gillespie, at the right, and Miss Sarah Conboy, centre, are three of the busiest women in Lawrence today, distributing relief to destitute strikers and their families.

HUNT BOSTON DYNAMITERS

Warrants are on their way to Boston from Indianapolis, it was learned to-day from that city, for men in Boston who were indicted in Indianapolis by the Federal Grand Jury in connection with the dynamite plot that was revealed at the McNamara trial in Los Angeles.

Similar papers also are going to other cities where arrests are to be made. It is reported the Grand Jury found forty-five indictments, and that they include men all over the country, from Boston to San Francisco.

As soon as the papers are received in Boston by representatives of the Federal government, and they are also received in other cities, word will be sent in code form to Indianapolis that the papers are in the right hands and then the arrests will be made simultaneously all over the country.

It was said today at the Federal building that the papers have not been received yet, but are expected.

According to a dispatch from Indianapolis today the men indicted include some of the best-known labor leaders in the United States. It is thought arrests will be made within five days.

KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN TELLS ABOUT MEETING DICKENS IN BOSTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—"When I was a little girl—six of the most enthralling words in the English language!—I lived in a little village in Maine," Kate Douglas Wiggin (Mrs. Riggs) said in an interview at Delmonico's.

"Children nowadays don't have time to love an author," Mrs. Riggs resumed, "but we did then. It was about that time my mother came to us one day with wonderful news—Dickens was coming to America!

"All through his journeys, I remember, I prayed for him every night that he might not even be seasick. Then came the day when he reached New York, and the day when he reached Boston, and then one incredible day it was announced that he was to read in Portland, only sixteen miles away.

"My mother was to take me to visit in Charlestown, and so it came about that we were in Portland on that day of days. I can't pretend to remember what the tickets to that reading cost, but when we got them made we found that all we I know that the price was so extravagant, according to the standards of our village, that she was never able to live it down. Taking me, of course, was out of the question.

Met on Train to Boston.

"No one asked me if I wanted to go, and I never said anything about it, but no one on any page of Foxe' book of martyrs suffered the pangs and agonies of disappointment that I did. I was still suffering from them when we set out again for Boston. At our second station everybody in our car rushed over to one side, and there I saw Dickens.

"Yes, it was Dickens—waving away a huge piece of sponge-cake that Mr. Osgood, his publisher, was pressing on him. Presently he came into the car behind ours and the train started, in a little while I slipped away from my mother and got into that other car. I took the only vacant seat I could find—beside the ice water and basket of pop corn. There I sat, hoping that his hat might fall upon me, and being glad that my mother had taken the old gray ribbons off my hat and wondering if Mr. Dickens would like the new ones.

"After a while Mr. Osgood went into the smoking car and an invisible hand lifted me out of my seat, drew me up the aisle and plumped me into the next of seats. Mr. Dickens was looking out of the window, but presently he turned and caught sight of me.

"'Well my boy!' he cried. 'Where did you come from?'

"I found myself saying that I had come from Hollis, Me., and that our house was just on the brink of the river, and that my mother and my Aunt Ellen had heard him read the night before.

"Such a little girl has never read my books!' he began in answer to some note of regret in my voice.

A Farewell Kiss.

"'All of them except two or three that are going to get in Boston,' I assured him, and he said again: 'God bless my soul!' Then I felt impelled to confess that sometimes I skipped parts of the long dialogues. Whereupon he took out a little notebook and made me tell him where the dull parts were and why I thought they were dull and whether they were sure of them in some books than in others. And I told him, as if I were telling him with bouquets!

"'Well, you do read like the best!' he asked as he put the notebook away.

"'Yes,' I said, and 'Good, so do I,' he cried back. It was the only time he raised his voice. Then he took my hand and put his arm about my waist and said: 'I like to think of your having read Copperfield seven times.' So I went on to tell on Saturday nights and Sunday mornings we never read about Steerforth on the beach or Little Nell or Tiny Tim because it made our eyes so swelled for Sunday school.

"We came to Boston at last, and he asked me if I was alone. 'Oh, no,' I said, 'I have my mother,' and he replied, 'You're a past master in the art of flattery.' Then hand in hand we went down the platform; there was one good-by kiss and he disappeared from my view, but never from my heart."

35 MILL GIRLS OUT ON STRIKE

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 7.—Thirty-five girls, whose average age is sixteen years, are out on strike, alleging 14 to 80 cents is too little for a week's work of fifty-five hours in the Regina Lace company's mills.

Two weeks ago the company, which is in Central Falls, decided to add a thread-drawing department to the plant and hired the young girls to do the work. When the girls received their pay envelopes, they found amounts ranging from 14 to 18 cents for their week's labor.

Eighteen of the girls immediately struck, and the other seventeen left the factory the following morning. The girls were paid three cents a hundred yards and although they worked their hardest, not one was able to earn an average of two cents an hour.

The girls appealed to Peter J. Quinn, a Pawtucket attorney. Quinn made a demand upon the company to pay each of the girls a dollar a day for their labor. The management ignored the demand, and as a result a summons has been served which calls for a hearing in the local court on February 15 to show cause why the girls shall not be paid a dollar a day for their services.

GETS DIVORCE AT 18; HUSBAND "CRUEL"

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 7.—Hattie G. Brown, eighteen, of Burrage, was granted a divorce from William E. Brown in the Superior Civil Court to-day. In her testimony the fact was brought out that Mrs. Brown was married when scarcely fourteen years old. Her husband was then twenty-four. In granting the divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, Judge Joseph J. Quinn gave the young mother the custody of her year-old boy. They were married at Everett and lived at Beechmont before moving to Burrage.

CONGRESS PLANS INQUIRY IN GREAT LAWRENCE STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Chairman Wilson of the House of Representative Committee on Labor announced today that his committee is now studying the conditions in Lawrence to determine if the federal government has any jurisdiction to interfere in the strike of the textile workers.

BERGER CALLS FOR INVESTIGATION.

This important announcement followed the action of Congressman Victor Berger, the Socialist member, who introduced a resolution in the House to-day providing for a committee of seven "to investigate the relations of the American Woolen Company to the strike of its operatives."

Congressman Berger charges the American Woolen Company with having imported cheap labor from Europe and with oppression and abuse of all of its employes, "ending in a reduction of 50 cents a week out of an already miserable wage averaging less than $6 per week."

It is generally believed that the Federal government will find reason for stepping into the strike because of the manner in which the mill operatives are recruited in Europe and brought to Lawrence.

FIGHTING FOR BUTLER STATUE

"If Ben Butler were alive, his opponents would never dare to speak of him as they have," declared D. L. Barnett, favoring the appropriation of $25,000 for a statue of General Butler to be placed in or near the State House. The statement was made at a hearing before the House Committee today, when arguments for and against the statue were presented. Colonel A. C. Drinkwater presided.

Colonel Drinkwater then introduced Comrade Edward A. Skelton of the G. A. R., who attributed the opposition to the statue to personal animus. "Those who oppose this resolve," said Mr. Skelton, "are friends of men for whom political death General Butler was responsible. I do not believe that they come here actuated by a desire for the good of this Commonwealth; rather that they come here you animated by personal bitterness toward the man who refused political advancement to their friends."

Friend of the Negro.

Bishop Walters of the Methodist Zion Church of New England, favored the resolve because Butler was a friend of the negro, and proved it by issuing his famous declaration that negroes captured by the Confederates would be considered "contraband of war."

The Rev. Dr. Hill, president of the Baptist Missionary Society, spoke for the bill on the same grounds, and added:

"If the Commonwealth feels unable to afford $25,000 for this statue, leave it to us. We will ourselves guarantee to raise half of it."

Ex-Mayor Henry Parsons of Marlboro, formerly State Senator, who was with Butler in every battle the General fought during the war, declared that nothing but personal animosity can account for the opposition to the statute.

Not Incompetent.

"General Butler has been called an incompetent officer," said Mr. Parsons. "But I, who followed him throughout the war, defy anybody to deny my assertion that the faults pointed out in his campaigns were due to disobedience on the part of his subordinates. General Hallett and General Gilmore repeatedly failed to follow his directions. And if General Butler had done his duty in obeying Butler, the war would have lasted two years sooner than it did. In fact, I defy anybody to point out a single regular officer who ever did obey a command of Butler's during the war."

The Rev. John Davis of the Ministerial Conference, said that as Butler was a lawyer and not a minister, he was, perhaps, not perfect. "But he was great," went on Mr. Davis, "because he protected the men of my race by declaring them to be 'contraband of war.'"

POLITICS, SAYS DALY'S ANSWER

Former Fire Commissioner Charles D. Daly today filed with the city clerk his answers to Mayor Fitzgerald's reasons for removing him from the office of fire commissioner. He says:

"The real reason for my removal from office is that I refused to allow the needs of the Boston Fire Department to be subject of political expediencies or political patronage, and that such policies were in accordance with my agreement with the Mayor, and bound to be incumbent upon any official cognizant of the huge responsibilities of the office of fire commissioner."

Under Section 14 of the revised charter any department head removed by the Mayor has a right to answer charges preferred against him by the Chief Executive, but here answers will have no effect on the Mayor's action in removing such a head.

Mayor Fitzgerald considers the fire commissionership indeed closed. It is understood, however, that the civil service commission has been holding up the appointment of Major Charles H. Dole until after Daly's answers were filed.

TAFT AROUSED OVER MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—President Taft conferred to-day with Secretary of State Knox, Secretary of War Stimson and Attorney General Wickersham over the situation in Mexico.

It is the President's morning engagements were deferred while he talked this matter over with his cabinet advisers.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 7.—Thirteen Mexican insurrectos, all armed and mounted, who crossed into United States territory near Noria, N. M., early today, were captured by United States soldiers doing patrol duty and brought here. They are charged with violating the neutrality laws.

SHUSTER AND GREY IN A CONFERENCE

LONDON, Feb. 7.—W. Morgan Shuster, former treasurer-general of Persia, who from time to time has criticised bitterly the foreign policy of Great Britain as regards Persia, held a long conference today with Foreign Minister Grey.

The meeting was cordial and both went into the subject of Persian affairs exhaustively. It is said a change in England's attitude toward Persia may result from the conference.

MRS. SARA CONBOY AROUSES STRIKING WEAVERS TO ACT

LAWRENCE, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Sara Conboy of Boston today made a striking speech to striking weavers and they appointed a committee to draw up their grievances and present them to the mill owners.

The meeting was held in Franco-American Hall. For a time it looked as though there would be no action because of the want of a leader. Then Mrs. Conroy got up.

"What is the matter with you people, any way?" she asked. "Out of all you present only one has admitted being from the Wood mill and only one from the Washington and none from the Ayer mill. What are you here for? Where do you work, anyway?

"We are not here to fool. We are here to try and reach a settlement, if possible, of this terrible affair. It has gone too far already. We must have a committee appointed to draw up your grievances. Some of you may not know it, but here are people in Lawrence today who are starving.

"Haven't you nerve enough to do something for yourselves? We are doing what we can for you. But more help is needed. We have not brought you here for the purpose of organizing you and we are not here to condone your criminality. We are here, though, to help settle this strike. And we can't do it without your assistance."

Demands Formulated.

This aroused the crowd, and a committee was appointed which formulated these demands:

Twenty per cent. increase in wages and the abolition of the bonus system, or of 10 per cent. increase with a continuance of the bonus system.

Pay for stoppage time.

At a meeting of the strike committee at No. 213 Common street today by the Industrial Workers of the World the following contributions were reported:

From a Polish priest of Nashua, N. H., $10; from the Lowell Textile Union Society, $72, and from the Schenectady Socialists, $90.

A relief committee of three was appointed and the members instructed to devote all their time to the assistance of the needy. It will have an office at No. 9 Mason street and will open from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

An auditing committee of nine was appointed to examine the books of the strike committee.

Plan to Get Secrets.

An attempt will be made next Friday, when Joseph J. Ettor and Arthur Giovannitti are arraigned in Lawrence on the charge of complicity in the murder of Annie Lo Pizzi, to expose the secrets of the Industrial Workers of the World.

This, it was learned today, was the reason that all the strike leaders, including William D. Haywood, William Yates and William Trautman, have been summoned as witnesses.

These men will be grilled as to the history of the organization, how it is reported, and questioned about the money they have received and what they have done with it.

They will also be questioned about the use of force in connection with the strike.

The strike resolved itself today into a competition between the Lawrence Central Labor Union and the Industrial Workers of the World in the organization of the strikers. Whichever succeeds in getting a majority of the strikers organized will control the situation.

Unions Seek Control.

The American Federation organizers are going at the work in a systematic way and it was the general belief today that they would soon have control of the situation.

On the other hand the Industrial Workers of the World were on the ground first and have a good start. For instance, there are about 6,000 German strikers and it was said today that the Industrial Workers of the World would have about 500 of them organized by night.

Many of the Germans are joining the various unions being formed by the Central Labor Union, also.

Dispatches from Washington say the American Federation of Labor today indorsed the appeal for assistance sent out by the textile workers of Lawrence. A circular was sent out from labor headquarters asking contributions to be used in aiding these strikers.

Talk of the extension of the strike to other mill cities, including Boston, was heard. This came from the camp of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Striker Wenek Sentenced.

John Wenek, a striker, was arraigned in court today on the charge that he had threatened to kill Mary Real and was fighting in the street with her when he was arrested by Lieutenant Coleman. When arrested Wenek had a revolver and several cartridges in his possession. He was sentenced to serve nine months for carrying a concealed weapon and one month for disturbing the peace. He appealed and was held in $500 bail.

Angelo Rocco was in court for the fourth time today since the strike started. He is charged with being mixed up in the first strike riot and has been able to have his case adjourned from time to time, and today appeared with his third lawyer. His case went over until tomorrow.

Meetings of the skilled operatives for organization and for the formulation of demands were held today in the school halls of the city. The superintendent of schools offered the halls to James Mouite, treasurer of the Central Labor Union, for the purpose.

The weavers, carders and combers of the Arlington mills already have organized. The chief demand is a 15 per cent. raise in pay. All the organized operatives will make this demand.

Prominent Boston women have taken hold of the relief work being carried on here by the Joint Relief Committee. This is under the direction of the local Central Labor Union and the Boston Women's Trade Union League.

Among the women who are taking part in the work are Mrs. Amos Pinchot, Mrs. Susan G. FitzGerald, Miss Mabel Gillespie, Miss Elizabeth Bennett and Mrs. Robert A. Woods.

These women went to work with a vim. They went into the houses of the poor and found out exactly what the conditions were. Several pitiful cases were discovered.

Groceries, clothing and fuel were furnished, regardless of whom the people were. If they were in need they were helped. The board of two babies whose mothers are out on strike was paid.

A comber who had been absent from the meetings of his craft was investigated. He had made no complaint and yet he and his family were in desperate straits.

The man, his wife and their baby were huddling in bed, trying to keep warm with scanty bed clothing. All of the chairs but one had been burned to heat the house.

Neither the man nor his wife had had anything to eat for two days. The baby had lived that time on one bottle of milk, bought with four cents which the man had picked up in the street.

Had no investigation not brought this case to light it was believed they would have starved to death.

Help was given to this family immediately. There is no red tape to the relief work managed by the joint committee. While names and facts are carefully noted, when cases deserving prompt attention are found relief is first given and the case investigated after this.

Through the various unions of the American Federation of Labor it is expected that the relief fund will soon be greatly swelled and it was said today that no family of a striker in Lawrence would be permitted to suffer.

There were rumors of settlement today. So far as could be learned from the organization they have no substantial basis. The talk was that the mill men would give in for fear the firemen of the mills would strike.

WHAT LEGISLATOR SAYS OF HEAD OF WOOLEN TRUST

This man has developed a veritable bull hole in the city of Lawrence; yes, and in all other towns which are operated under his fiendish administration. He has engineered his manikins to crowd the "hands" down below the living line. He has played the nationalities against each other to the degradation of the entire working class. He has speeded up the machinery to a point where it breaks the operator both mentally and physically in a few short years. If the victims, both living and dead, of this so-called Woolen Trust, of which he is the directing demon, could be marshalled and paraded before him in single file, it would take months to review the line, and if he were compelled to review it, his heart would have to be made of the same material his name is taken from, if he did not collapse ere the first hundred pass.—Dr. J. Stanton Gould of Rhode Island Legislature, speaking of President Wood of the American Woolen Company.

Ettor to Be Arraigned on Friday, and Strike Leaders Have Been Summoned.

It was also reported the mills would rather give in to the strikers than have all of the operatives organized with that American Federation of Labor behind them to enforce their demands.

On the other hand, there is a general belief the mills welcome organization and that the American Federation of Labor was aware of this feeling before they stepped into the breach.

There will be no let up in the fight to free Joseph J. Ettor and Antonio Giovannitti, the mill strike leaders. Plans are already being made to renew the battle to have the two men released on Friday when their cases are again called in the District Court here.

If this fails the strike committee leaders declare they will carry their petition for a writ of habeas corpus to the United States supreme Court. The men are held for alleged complicity in the murder of Annie Lo Pizzi, who was shot in a strike riot.

William D. Haywood returns to Lawrence today and will hold another secret conference with the executive committee of the strikers. These secret sessions, though denied by the heads of the various relief measures, are directed, it is learned, at the organization of a state wide strike, affecting first, upon the advice of Haywood, the cities of Fitchburg and Worcester. The strikers plan to delay their strike till a blow will be most effective, at the time their new agreements are signed and stock in preparation for the fall trade.

Colonel Frank A. Cutting of the Fifth Regiment is in Lawrence today with his entire staff and will be associated with Colonel Wessner, who, however, remains ranking officer. The soldiers' picket lines have been extended to cover the territory bounded by the Merrimac and Spicket rivers, and by Prospect and Bailey hill. Operatives living in distant parts of the city are thus given free and unimpeded access to the mills if they care to come to work.

The Uaweau Mills opened on full time today. Vice-president Ivor L. Sjostrom said:

"The indications point to our having all the help we need in the future. The outlook is very gratifying to us, and, I think, hopeful to the other mills."

The Atlantic Cotton Mills, which have been voluntarily closed down for more than two weeks and were expected to remain closed till all strike trouble was over, opened up today. Hurry notices were sent to the twelve hundred employes that the gates would be open for all who wished to go to work, and when opening time came today 600 of that number reported in and took their places at the machines.

These mills, with the Everett Mills, were the only ones that closed down altogether. The Everett remains closed. The Atlantic Mills manufacture cotton print goods.

Hinges on Point of Law.

In denying the strike leaders' former appeal for a writ, Judge Braley, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, declared that he could not grant it unless there was in unusual cases, for example where the health of a defendant was impaired by confinement, put in this case by the trial judge, who is familiar with the facts, having power to act, and who, in the exercise of his discretion, he ought not to overcome for the Judge would not perform his duty.

His Honor said that if on examination it appeared that there was no reasonable ground to hold the defendants they would be discharged.

No other consideration, he said, would enter into the case. The writ, therefore, was significant in view of intimation that the defendants would be held chiefly for the purpose of getting them out of the way.

Not Shot By Police Patrol.

John F. Lynch and George E. Roewer, Jr., appeared for the petitioners and District Attorney H. C. Atwill of Essex County, representing Labor Jesse Brown, in whose custody the men are.

It was the purpose of the petitioners to show by evidence that the defendants were not near the scene of the crime at the time of the shooting; that the woman was killed by a policeman. District Attorney Atwill said the autopsy report showed death was caused by a bullet from a 38-calibre revolver and the two police officers who were on the scene at the time carried 32-calibre revolvers.

The first question was whether the defendants were entitled to bail. He did not think the court on a habeas corpus proceedings would try the question of guilt or innocence of the accused. The Commonwealth did not think the court should grant the writ.

Mr. Lynch contended that the court has power under section 25 of chapter 191 of the Revised Laws to admit a person to bail for whatever cause he has been committed, and he cited the instance of the release of Sarah J. Robinson, accused of murder on bail in $5,000. Her bail was fixed at $5,000. He thought the court should hear evidence in order to exercise its discretion wisely as to the advisability of admitting the defendants to bail.

Not a Question of Law.

His Honor held that the question raised was not to the merits of the whole case. He said: "The only offence not bailable by statute in this Commonwealth is treason. There is also no doubt, as a matter of practice, but that murder is a bailable offence. But the prisoner is not entitled to bail as a matter of right and because of the gravity of each the practice has been not to admit to bail in such cases.

"There are undoubtedly circumstances which might make it necessary to modify this rule. Now in this case the petitioners had been arrested on a charge of being an accessory before the fact to murder, which is punishable on conviction like the principal offence. It therefore looks with the principal offence.

"The Supreme Court was not asked to discharge the prisoners nor could it do so, because the District Court has jurisdiction of the offence charged in the complaint. The only thing the court was asked to do was to exercise its discretion and to bail the defendants not being entitled to habeas corpus as a matter of right."

The entire bill of complaint framed by the committee of the Arlington Mills weavers, who are largely English-speaking men and women, is as follows:

1. A uniform standard price flat to be paid by the pick for all work.
2. No double cuts.
3. Measure of cuts to be sixty-five yards; no longer.
4. Fifteen per cent. increase.
5. Pay when looms are stopped for cause over which weaver has no control.

The strike committee has abandoned its hall on Common street. For the last two days the meetings there have been crowded and the floor and the overhead rafters have buckled so that it looked as if the place might collapse at any moment. The committee moved in No. 213 Common street, but this hall was in little better condition, and Haywood announced that hereafter the meetings will be held in Franco-Belgian Hall, the original meeting place of the strike committee.

The exodus from the city continues. A number of French-Canadian families packed up and moved out, and in the Franco-Canadian quarters the "to let" signs are beginning to appear in the tenement windows.

The Master Bakers' Co-operative Union of Boston sent a committee to Lawrence to arrange a contribution to the strikers.

Electrical Workers Meet.

The committee, which consisted of Robert Rausch president, Daniel Lynch and Frank H. Hartebecker, was empowered to engage Lawrence bakers to make bread to the cost of $100 and to distribute tickets to poor people which would be good for bread when presented by the Poor.

The committee alighted at the station and asked a porter where to go to get into touch with the relief work of the strike. The porter sent them to Central Labor Union Hall, and they went there and arranged with the Central Labor Union committee for the distribution of tickets.

Then they went to four bakers and arranged for the baking of the bread. And when the strike committee leaders heard of the mistake they were angry enough.

The Electrical Workers' Union held a meeting and appointed a committee of two men from each plant to formulate grievances and demands and present them to another meeting on Friday night.

Why Actresses Never Grow Old

(Theatrical World)

Nothing concerning the profession seems more puzzling to the dear old public than the perpetual youth of our feminine members. How often we hear remarks like, "Why, I saw her as Juliet forty years ago and she doesn't look a year older now!" Of course allowance is made for make-up, but when they see us off the stage at close range, they need another explanation.

How strange women generally haven't learned the secret of keeping the face young! How simple a matter to get an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, apply it like cold cream, and in the morning wash it off! We know how this gradually, imperceptibly absorbs old cuticle, keeping the complexion new and fresh, free from fine lines, sallowness or overredness. We know, too, that this mercolized wax is the reason actresses don't wear moth patches, liver spots, pimples and the like. Why don't our sisters on the other side of the footlights learn the reason, and profit by it?

BOSTON MAN IN STEEL INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Before the Stanley steel investigating committee today it was charged by Shelby Harrison of the Survey Magazine that Charles M. Cabot of Boston, a large stockholder in the steel corporation, wished to circulate certain magazine articles on conditions in the steel mills among the stockholders of the corporation, but was forced by threats to abandon his plan before he could obtain a stockholders' list for this purpose.

Harrison said that in May and June last he entered the camps of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company in the Birmingham District. At that time they employed 260 State convicts and 240 county convicts, approximately 40 per cent. of the convict labor of that State.

"The convicts are divided into 'task groups' according to their physical condition," said Harrison. "There are four such classes. At the time I made my investigation the companies paid $25 a man per month for State convicts of the first class. The wage scale decreased in proportion to the tasks until for the fourth class $10.50 was paid each month for every man.

"A rising scale of free labor wage has caused a proportionate rise in the convict labor scale, so that now $50.70 is paid for a first class man and $13.57 is paid for a fourth-class man. For county convicts the average is $15.00 per month. In Alabama the average income to the State from convict labor has been estimated at $400,000."

At this point Attorney D. A. Reid for the steel interests said the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company will make no new contracts for convict labor when the present contracts expire. Chairman Stanley replied that he had so understood the situation, but that he intends to summon officials of the company to produce their former contracts.

BOSTON MAN IN CADIZ STRUCK BY TIDAL WAVE

CADIZ, Spain, Feb. 7.—A tidal wave destroyed a portion of this city today, damaging part of the walls of the fortress and causing $1,000,000 loss.

Weak Kidneys Weaken the Whole Body

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No man is stronger than his kidneys. Overwork, colds, grippe, etc., weaken the kidneys and the whole body suffers. Don't neglect the slightest kidney ailment. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They are especially for sick kidneys. Endorsed by Boston people.

John A. Sleeman, 7 School Place, Cambridge, Mass., says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and I realized that unless I found relief the complaint would soon get the better of me. There was a dull, grinding pain in the small of my back and it was only with difficulty that I could straighten after stooping. The kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage and I did not sleep well. I doctored faithfully, but the physicians seemed unable to help me. Through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills my health was restored and my kidneys became normal."

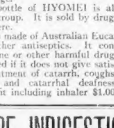
Fine for Croup

Mothers Should Cut This Out and Never Be Unprepared.

In any home where a child has a tendency to croup, a bottle of HYOMEI (pronounce it High-o-me) should be kept constantly on hand.

A sudden attack of croup with difficult breathing and extreme distress is apt to come on at any time.

The course to be pursued is plain. Send for your doctor at once, and in the meantime drop 30 drops of Hyomei into a bowl of boiling water, and hold the child's head over it, cover with a towel or shawl, so that only the air filled with Hyomei vapor is breathed.



This method of treatment has saved many a child's life, and mothers encroupy children should see to it that HYOMEI is always on hand. Full instructions for prompt relief of croup is in each package.

A 50-cent bottle of HYOMEI is all you need for croup. It is sold by druggists everywhere.

HYOMEI is made of Australian Eucalyptus and other antiseptics. It contains no cocaine or other harmful drug. Money returned if it does not give satisfaction in treatment of catarrh, coughs, colds, croup and throat deafness. Complete outfit including inhaler $1.00.

RAILROAD EDICT HITS MEYER DOG

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 7.—Mrs. George von L. Meyer, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, her two daughters, a huge milk-white dog, name unknown, a brakeman, a timorous assistant conductor, and Conductor Frank Burke, were the cast of a little comedy that amused passengers on the Boston & Wolfboro express out of here for Hamilton, Mass., where the Meyers have a country home.

Mrs. Meyer, with her daughters and the dog, the latter dragging at the end of a long ribbon leash, rushed into the station here and boarded the train in a great hurry. The dog went right into the passenger cars with the family and occupied the seat with Mrs. Meyer, while the daughters sat just behind.

The rule of the company forbids dogs from riding in passenger cars, and so, when Assistant Conductor Miller came through, the passengers expected trouble. He took a look at the dog, stopped, saw Mrs. Meyer and hurried past to the end of the car.

Presently along came Brakeman Phillips. He took a long look at the dog, too, then hurried to Miller.

"Hey, you ain't going to let that dog stay in here, are you?" he demanded.

"Sh-h-h!" said Miller. "Don't you know who that is?"

Their whispers were plainly audible through the car as the train had stopped at a station.

"No, who is it?" asked the brakeman.

"Why, her husband is Secretary of the Navy. We want to go slow with her," explained Miller.

Phillips pondered a minute. "That dog hasn't any business in here. I don't care who she is," he said at last.

Mrs. Meyer overheard and smiled, but said nothing.

Then along came Conductor Frank Burke. He looked over his glasses at the dog. The passengers in neighboring seats were staring.

"Are to take that dog up ahead, ma'am," Burke said at last.

"Yes, of course that is the rule," said Mrs. Meyer. "Won't you see to it for me?"

The conductor was all smiles. He beckoned to Phillips, and the brakeman hurried to remove the offending canine. At the Hamilton station, Mrs. Meyer went to the baggage car and claimed her dog. none the worse for the trip, and the passengers from the Wolfboro saw, as the train pulled out, the big white pet jumping in welcome to the daughters and his mistress.

Parents Make Children Lie by Breaking Promises to Them

Miss Hill, settlement worker, who says a lie is a lie, and that Professor Hoben's ingenious classification won't help a little bit.

By SYBIL WARNE.

Do you tell the society lie?

Do you tell the professional lie?

Do you tell the art lie or the boasting lie or the heroic lie or the adulterative lie?

There are ten different kinds of lies that people are telling today, according to Professor Allen Hoben, of the University of Chicago, who in that institution is in charge of sociology.

The ten different kinds of lies that people are telling today bear a contrast to the ten commandments.

Miss Nellie F. Hill, in charge of the Frances E. Willard Settlement House on Chambers street, who has had a large experience in settlement work and is thrown into contact constantly with young girls and boys, doesn't take much stock in Professor Hoben's classification.

A lie is a lie, according to her. To put up a list of different kinds would confuse the modern girl, she thinks.

Worse Lies Than Oleo.

Artificial flowers that society people are wearing, or oleomargarine for butter, may be fossilized lies, but that they cannot compare with the lies that many modern parents are putting before their children in the way of their unfulfilled promises, says the settlement worker.

Miss Hill is a practical woman who believes mottoes about truthfulness placed in the settlement house will do more to prevent lying than to classify lies. In her work she would not dare to give her girls oleomargarine for she believes in real things, though they may cost more.

Label every lie as a lie, is her policy. "There are no ten lies. You cannot put lies in the same number with the ten commandments," said Miss Hill, when asked how she treated the girls under her charge.

"A lie is a lie and to make distinctions about different kinds of lies is wide of the mark.

"Professor Allen Hoben of the University of Chicago may classify lies, but it is a disappointing way to treat lies and it would never do in our settlement work.

"Our girls come in here, suppose we should ask them: 'What kind of lies ... kinds of lying—the society lie, the fairy lie, or the boasting lie, or the deferential lie, or the heroic lie, or the white lie, or the art lie, or the adulterative lie?'

"Imagine putting a girl up before this list!

"No, we teach here that a lie is a lie and that it cannot be classified.

Developing Truthfulness.

"When we want to impress any one with truthfulness, we use that word in a conspicuous way. We put it into mottoes all over our rooms. For one month we impress upon all our settlement houses what truthfulness is. Every one is thinking about it and trying to follow it. Would Professor Hoben's method be the right one here? We think that it would be absolutely confusing.

"Don't you think that artificial flowers or adulterated food give them false impressions and show them that lying is going on in other directions than in words?" Miss Hill was asked.

"This may be so in many instances. Artificial flowers that society people are using extensively to-day have a false ring to them," she replied.

"You can lie in act as well as in word, but it is a lie, nevertheless, and it is merely trifling with lies to try to separate them. The occasion for lying may be stronger in some instances than in others, but the lie is the same.

"What makes lying easy to some girls is the way that their parents lie to them. You often hear a parent saying, 'If you do this you will have something that you will like.' The child does as it is told, expecting what has been promised, and often that is never given. Now to the child such treatment is an encouragement to lie. Many parents are training their children to lie by the manner they are deceived, and how to put their substitutes.

Teaching Children to Lie.

"A parent should never promise to do for a child what it never can fulfil.

"Most children are made to lie by parents deceiving them than by putting oleomargarine on the table for butter or using cottonseed oil for olive oil.

"The physician sometimes lies with a good motive in view, but he is telling a lie just the same, and it is not right, to my way of thinking, to placard lies and to have lies for the doctor to tell, a few for the lawyer, some for society women and one or two to describe art. Why, if we agreed with Professor Hoben in his distinctions, we should get lying down so fine that soon we should have to be running to a dictionary on lying to find out what sort of a lie was being told.

"Let's be content to call every lie a lie and then let us give the same criticism to all and label them alike."

Peculiar After Effects of Grip This Year

Leaves Kidneys in Weakened Condition

Doctors in all parts of the country have been kept busy with the epidemic of grip which has visited so many homes. The symptoms of grip this year are very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition, particularly the kidneys which seem to suffer most, as every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to more serious sickness, such as dreaded Bright's Disease. Local druggists report a large sale on Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which so many people say soon heals and strengthens the kidneys after an attack of grip. Swamp-Root is a great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, and, being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed by those who try it. Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., offer to send a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, free by mail, to every sufferer who requests it. A trial will convince any one who may be in need of it. Regular size bottles 50 cts. and $1.00. For sale at all druggists. Be sure to mention this paper.

MUST NEWPORT GO? The writer of a lively story in the Sunday AMERICAN declares that city is doomed as a Summer resort because the Navy Department has designs upon the place. This will make them laugh up in Portsmouth, where everybody believes that the plan to abandon the smaller navy yards is due to the partiality of the navy set for "Society." An interesting story, nevertheless, to be found only in the Sunday AMERICAN.

KAISER URGES WORLD PEACE

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—A declaration in favor of world peace was the most striking feature of Emperor William's address opening the Reichstag to-day. In view of the fact that the Socialists hold the majority of seats the Emperor's plea for universal peace was regarded as peculiarly significant. However, in advocating amnesty with the world at large the War Lord argued that the best means of preserving peace with other powers was for Germany to strengthen her defensive powers by increasing the army and navy.

In conclusion the Emperor said: "My policy is directed toward insuring peaceful relations between all the powers upon a reciprocal basis of esteem and good will."

Carrying out their ideas of democracy, the Socialists in the Reichstag, 110 in number, refused to assemble at the palace before the session started. Members of all other parties visited the palace before entering the Reichstag chamber.

FIREMAN SAVED BY ICE ON HAT

EAST BROOKFIELD, Feb. 7.—A shoulding of ice which had formed on the helmet saved Fireman Leon Lorenz's life when he was fighting a fire which destroyed the Mann & Stevens Woolen Company's mill No. 3 today. A half ton of ice sliding from the roof struck Lorenz on the head, but the ice on his hat served as a buffer, and he escaped with slight injuries.

The fire started from a button which fell into the picker, the friction making a spark which ignited cloth. Thirty men were working in the mill, but they escaped without injury. The damage to the building was about $15,000, but no estimate could be made of the loss on the contents.

GIRL GIVES CLEW IN SLAYER HUNT

LAWRENCE, Feb. 7.—A young girl has furnished the police with the description and name of the man now being sought for the quadruple murder in the Valley street mill tenement here Friday, and the officials are closing in on his hiding place.

The man is a Syrian, and, according to the girl, whose name is being carefully guarded, is well known in the Syrian colony where he posed as somewhat of a sport, wearing good clothes and apparently well supplied with money at all times.

It is known that he was among the party in the Saveria flat on the night of the tragedy but has completely disappeared since the murders were discovered.

The young woman told the police that she had kept silent through fear of an attack by friends of the suspect, who, the police declare, are now sheltering him.

The girl is said to be a cousin of Mrs. Dennis, one of the victims.

The description given by this young woman also tallies with that given by Isaac Maslen, who lived across the hall from the victims and who saw this man leave the house with his coat sleeves rolled up and carrying a knife in his hand.

This new girl chum of Mrs. Dennis was the last known person to have seen the four victims alive. She, with her sister, called at the house early in the evening, on their way to a dance. The younger sister remained downstairs, while the older went to the flat on the second floor.

In her talk with the police she told them that she saw Mrs. Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. Savoria, Maroon and another man. They were drinking at the time, and a pack of cards lay on the dining room table. She saw Maroon display a large roll of bills.

She told them that she was going to a dance and that her sister was waiting downstairs for her. She left shortly afterward.

About midnight she returned alone, and the five people were still there, drinking and playing cards. She remained until 1 o'clock and then returned to her home.

Two hours later the Maslen girl heard the moans of the woman, followed by the slamming of a door, and on going to the window saw the short, stout man with a gray coat with a knife in his hand walking through the alley.

Two suspects were taken to the station house by Patrolmen Timothy McCarthy and Edgar Ramsbottom. They were put through a severe grilling, which lasted two hours, by the State and local police, but they accounted for their time on the night of the murder.

Based on the report of Medical Examiner Dow, the police believe that Mrs. Dennis was the first attacked, but was the last to succumb.

It is their opinion that the slayer and Mrs. Dennis were talking together while Mr. Savoria was asleep on the couch in the kitchen. Mrs. Savoria was asleep in her room and Maroon was asleep in another part of the house.

Just what started the trouble the police are unable to say, but they think that the slayer became infuriated at some remark made by Mrs. Dennis over Maroon's money, while they were talking at the kitchen table, and that he grabbed her by the throat, as finger marks were found on her neck by Medical Examiner Dow.

Before she could make an outcry her assailant plunged a stiletto into my neck, following this up with a series of short stabs in the face.

Suffering from loss of blood she staggered to her room, where she fell onto the bed with her knees resting on the floor. She was found in this position by the police.

HARVARD WILL HEAR GERMAN SCIENTIST

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—Professor Wilhelm Paszkowski, the director of the scientific information bureau of the University of Berlin, will leave for the United States on March 9, to deliver a series of lectures on German culture on the invitation of the Germanic Society of New York. He is to lecture at the Universities of Columbia, Harvard, Yale and also to several western cities. Professor Paszkowski visited America in 1905. He is one of the best known professors among American and other foreign students at the University of Berlin.

LONDON PEACE LEADER TO GIVE LECTURE HERE

Rev. Dr. W. Evans Darby, secretary of the London Peace Society, will soon arrive in Boston and give a few lectures before the different ministers associations of this city. A few years ago Mr. Darby visited Boston and spoke before the ministers of the Universalist Church in Ballou hall. His book, "Beneath Bow Bells," is one of the most popular works in the interest of the peace movement.

Rheumatism Advice.

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

"From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." This is said to be the quickest and best remedy known to the medical profession for rheumatism and backache. Good results come after the first dose. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original one ounce, sealed, yellow package. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured here by this prescription last Winter.

CASCARETS FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS! BILIOUS HEADACHE, SALLOW SKIN

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes, your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Remember that disorders of the stomach, liver and intestines are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—a 10-cent box will keep you and the entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children.

10 Cents. Never gripe or sicken.

WESTBORO ASKS GRAND TRUNK

The bustling town of Westboro, out in Worcester County, with its 5,446 wide-awake inhabitants (see last United States census report), adds its warm approval of the petition of the Grand Trunk railroad to enter Boston. This makes one more community to join in the general commendation of the movement started by the AMERICAN.

Westboro not only approves the Grand Trunk's petition highly, but seeks to have the road pass through or near the town. The Board of Trade has just written a new brief for its members. This quote is:

"Get the Grand Trunk for Westboro, or get it as near here as possible."

This slogan is being sounded through the town to-day, following an enthusiastic meeting of the Board at which the railroad committee of the Board was instructed to get right after this idea with all speed.

To-day Chairman Charles L. Leonard and other members of the committee went to Worcester to ascertain the proposed Grand Trunk route and to see where Westboro is going to come in on the proposition.

Attorney John Rice, secretary of the Marlboro board, who was one of the committee to meet the officials of the Grand Trunk Railroad in Marlboro, addressed the members on the prospects of the road coming in that section. He said, in part:

"The coming to Westboro or Marlboro of the Grand Trunk line, or even in this vicinity, so it could be reached by a branch line, would mean increasing manufacturers for our towns and cities, and it will bring competition, giving us better rates.

"I am not working in the interest of any corporation, but simply interested in the Grand Trunk coming within reach of Westboro and Marlboro, as it will mean much for both places. The Grand Trunk line is going to Blackstone and Worcester, anyway, and I feel it is coming our way, from what I hear.

"The officials at the meeting in Boston last week stated all they wanted was the good will of the people, and to have the privilege of coming through the towns and cities. If you should have two railroad lines in Westboro it would mean more industries for the town.

"What we want to do is to unite the boards of trade in Westboro, Marlboro, Worcester and other surrounding towns and work together with the one object of getting the Grand Trunk line within our reach."

Selectman Reilly said: "This is one of the most important matters that ever came before the town and should receive the attention of every voter. What this town has always needed was two railroads to get new industrials here. I believe the railroad committee of the Board of Trade should take the matter up at once and find out what they propose to do in Worcester and then keep after them to come in this direction."

Jonathan A. Hunt of the Hunt Metal Corner Company spoke in favor of the Grand Trunk RaiRoad going through Westboro, believing the competition would bring about better freight rates.

John W. Brittan was in favor of the Grand Trunk, or any other line that is up-to-date.

George G. Gentner, treasurer and manager of the Westboro Hat Company, spoke in favor of the project.

DYNAMITE TRAIN, FLEE WITH CASH

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 7.—Rock Island passenger train No. 43, bound west from Memphis, was held up by bandits and dynamited seventeen miles east of Hurlburt, Ark., early to-day. The train carried a large amount of specie and many express money orders. The robbers fired two blasts of dynamite, which shattered the express car and set it on fire. So terrific was the detonation that passengers were thrown from their berths, and windows in houses a mile away were broken.

This is the second time within two months that No. 43 has been held up.

The mail, baggage and express cars were destroyed by dynamite. The bandits cut all the telegraph and telephone wires between Memphis, Hurlburt and Little Rock. Bill Williams, a negro brakeman, was killed by the explosion. A tramp riding on the blind baggage was blown to pieces. The express safe was blown, but only two drafts, one for $600 and another for $200, and $50 are missing.

Post office inspectors believe the robbers failed to get any of the registered mail.

The United States Express Company admitted today they carried probably a half million dollars out of Memphis last night on the train, mostly going to small banks between Memphis and Little Rock. This money was in a separate safe under the guard of two armed messengers.

They were instructed by the local agent to sit on the box until the last dollar was delivered. According to the express company officials they did not quit their post when the bandits fired a hundred shots in the car after flagging the train at the west of the junction. Two men boarded the engine and ordered it uncoupled. It was run down the track not more than a hundred yards from the train.

BROKEN MAIN FLOODS STREE

Boylston street, Cambridge, near the Elevated power house, was flooded to a depth of 150 feet when a twelve-inch water main burst at 8:20 today and caused a fountain to play fifteen feet up in the air.

A hurry call to the Cambridge water department brought men who shut off the flow, after which the flood gradually subsided.

Your Vitality Can Be Restored

Strong, vital, manly men fascinate all who come within their influence. I can restore your VITAL STRENGTH, if there is not a shadow of a doubt as to what I can thus do. BUT there is a single condition, one restriction I put, a certain solemn promise I exact from you before you can exact a promise from me; namely, you must uncoupl tionally agree now at once and forever to discontinue all debilitating excess or dissipation that you may be indulging; with this one I will do all the rest. Remember what I say; no matter what your present condition, no matter what has happened in the past, just forget it and put yourself in my hands; everything will come out as you wish it. I use no drugs, no lotions, no medicines; I place no foolish restrictions upon you, just lead a natural life, get all the enjoyment you possibly can, but cease dissipation; always remember that. I can then restore your vital energy; I can take you out of the half man class and put you in the spot light of full, healthy, contented manly courage; I can make you feel young again and keep you feeling young to a ripe old age, because I drive into your system the one thing which keeps the whole organism in balance, namely, VITALITY. My HEALTH BELT is the greatest single self-treatment remedy or VITALITY RESTORATIVE that the world has ever known or probably ever will know. It is worn comfortably about the waist all night and every night for two or three months. Thus while you are sleeping it sends a great, soft, potent but diffused current of VITAL FORCE into your blood and nerves. There is not a moment's wait. It restores your vitality. It takes the pain out of your back. It makes you feel strong and vigorous, it drives away rheumatism, it cures kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders.

MUTT AND JEFF AND BUD HERE

As the itemizer from the village would say, Mr. Bud Fisher, Mr. Mutt and Mr. Jeff are in our midst. They have sized up Boston. Bostonians may not agree with their verdict, but it sounds like the real thing.

It had been reported to this inimitable trio that the coverlet of culture was so thick in Boston that Bostonians were afraid to laugh.

It is a canard, it is not true. Bostonians are eager to laugh. Mr. Fisher says so. Mr. Mutt says so. And Little Jeff says ditto.

They have proven it. For three months at one of the local theatres Mutt and Jeff disported themselves. They created a Niagara of mirth.

Now they're at Keith's. Mr. Fisher is holding there what he has been doing all over the country—he's showing that as laugh-producers the famous pair are incomparable.

On the stage Mr. Fisher does not say a word. But he makes pictures that speak. He picks out men and women in the audience and transfers them to his canvas with a few deft strokes.

Mr. Fisher off the stage is about as talkative as the celebrated citizen of the Nile Valley, Mr. Sphinx. Here's a bright little interview with Mr. Fisher:

"Do you like Boston, Mr. Fisher?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Nice people here."

"Don't you find this a sort of highbrow city compared to little old Broadway?"

"I hadn't noticed it."

"Haven't you found any difference between Boston and New York?"

"Well, yes—Boston is not so fresh, so breezy as New York."

"Anything else?"

"Yes, Mutt, Jeff and I have made a discovery. They say Bostonians do not like to laugh. They do. We've found it out. But they like high class fun. They don't care for the slap-stick stuff."

TWO WOMEN BADLY BURNED BY OIL

Mrs. Louise Edwin, fifty years old, of the South End, and Mrs. Ella Jennings, fifty-four, of No. 20 Burleigh street, Cambridge, were seriously burned in the home of Mrs. Jennings by oil from an overturned lamp. The two women were taken from the house by firemen. They were taken to the Cambridge Relief Hospital, where it was said that they would not live.

LYNN IS AFTER HAIR SNIPPER

A new note in the weird catalogue of "Jack the Snippers" is created in Greater Boston today when a warrant was served for the Lynn police, charging larceny of hair goods, scissors and a manicuring set in Lynn on Carl Mann, who is already held in $500 bail on a charge of cutting five inches from the braid of eleven-year-old Ida Shanfield of No. 42 Lynde street.

There have been several "snipping" cases in Boston, but this is the first time that a person accused of that offence has also been charged with stealing hair from a hair store.

The Lynn police say that Mann broke into the hair dressing parlors of Mrs. Annie M. Hamel, No. 28 Market street, and of Mrs. Della M. Pearse, No. 67 Market street, taking three pairs of scissors, four switches and a manicure set. Inspector Thorn of Lynn says he found two of the switches in Mann's room.

Mann is held in $500 for a continued hearing in Boston Municipal Court February 15 on the "snipping" charge. After that case is settled he will be turned over to the Lynn authorities.

EASY TO MAKE, EASY TO TAKE

Simple Home Remedy That Acts Like Magic Cures Colds, Coughs and Catarrh

Mix together in a large bottle a half pint of whiskey, two ounces of glycerine and half an ounce of virgin oil of pine. Shake well and take a teaspoonful every four hours.

Your cold, however severe, will disappear in less than a day. Chronic catarrh will yield promptly to this simple treatment. Rheumatism, leucorrhoea and inflammation of the urinary passages find permanent cure, and the misery of backache and grippe is speedily relieved by the use of this medicine.

The ingredients may be secured at any drug store, but the utmost care should be taken to prevent the against substitution of some other article of similar name for the pure virgin oil of pine. The only absolutely genuine article is sold in sealed half-ounce packages bearing the name of the Leach Chemical Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which is your guarantee of purity and freshness.

ACTRESS TELLS STORY IN BOMB MURDER MYSTERY

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Revenge for the thought the box was delivered by the man who committed the crime, or by a messenger in his employ. Today's developments, however, seem to shatter that theory.

Miss Edna LaMarre, the actress who is held as a material witness, made a complete statement to the police today. She told everything that happened on the night of the tragedy. At the request of Mrs. Taylor, Miss LaMarre called her up on the telephone, posing as Mrs. Susie Evans, sister of the slain woman. Mrs. Taylor wanted to get rid of Dickinson so as to see another caller. Mrs. Taylor answered loudly enough for Dickinson to hear, saying:

"Oh, hello, Susie. Is that you? I want you to come up here. Dick is here and is giving me a bit of trouble."

A half hour later the bomb exploded and Mrs. Taylor was killed.

Clifford S. Roe of the American Vigilance Association, who is investigating the white slave traffic, has given the police much information about Mrs. Taylor, who was formerly known as Mrs. Howard Walker. On this information detectives are searching for Carl Kaestler, a Hungarian, who was arrested in December as the result of an investigation of Dr. Olivette Leonard case. Mrs. Taylor was fined $50 in the case for harboring the girl in a disreputable home. Kaestler was not indicted and disappeared.

Detectives are working on the theory that Kaestler had a few scores to settle with Mrs. Taylor because of the evidence she gave against him at the Leonard girl hearing. They have obtained information from Olivette Leonard showing Kaestler was suspicious of Mrs. Taylor.

John Brown, seventeen years old, of No. 233 East Thirty-sixth street, the messenger seen near the Taylor home, was questioned today.

"I heard a noise like heavy thunder," said the youth to the police when they found him. "It was just looking at the house when it went off. With it came a flash of flame.

"I ran right to the house and tried to look into the window, but the shade was down. Just as I got there another man came. A few seconds later another man came running out of the house. Some one said a woman had just committed suicide, and then I walked away to my wagon.

"Some one asked me what I was doing there, and I told them that I was just delivering a couple of packages up the street."

When Charles M. Dickinson, who was with Mrs. Taylor at the time of the explosion, was taken from the Tombs for arraignment before Coroner Feinberg on an affidavit charging him with having given Mrs. Taylor the bomb that killed her, the police said they were searching for a young woman who formerly lived at Mrs. Taylor's apartment and left after a quarrel with her.

MUSIC TAUGHT FREE

Home Instruction

Special Offer to Readers of The American

In order to advertise and introduce their home study music lessons in every locality the International Institute of Music of New York will give free to our readers a complete course of instruction for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Cornet, Banjo, Cello or Sight Singing. In return they simply ask that you recommend their Institute to your friends after you learn to play.

You may not know one note from another; yet, by their wonderfully simple and thorough method, you can soon learn to play. If you are an advanced player you will receive special instruction.

The lessons are sent weekly. They are so simple and easy that they are recommended to any person or little child who can read English. Photographs and drawings make everything plain. Under the Institute's free tuition offer you will be asked to pay only a very small amount (average 1½ cents a week) to cover postage and the necessary sheet music.

One should overlook this wonderful offer. Tell your friends about it—show this article to them.

The International Institute has successfully taught others and can successfully teach you, even if you know absolutely nothing whatever about music. The lessons make everything clear.

Write today for the free booklet, which explains everything. It will convince you and cost you nothing. Address your letter or postal card to International Institute of Music, 58 Fifth Ave., Dept. 239, New York, N. Y.

ALL INTERESTED IN BOY CONTEST

Intense interest is being manifested in the Country Boy Contest that is being run by the AMERICAN. Every day brings more and more letters into the office of the Contest Editor. Mail is being received from all parts of the New England States, and the interest has not been confined to the young.

"Which boy has the greater natural opportunity for success in life, the city boy or the country boy?"

That is the question for discussion.

The contest was suggested by Edgar Selwyn's comedy, "The Country Boy," now running at the Park Theatre.

Answers to the question should not run over 150 words. Write on one side of the paper. Sign your name and address at the bottom, and illustrate your answer with an actual example of some man whose success in life has influenced your decision. Address letters to the Country Boy Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston.

There is a total of $75 in gold, as well as theatre boxes and theatre seats, offered by the AMERICAN as prizes in this contest.

There are four sets of weekly prizes, followed by the Grand Prizes at the finish. The weekly prizes include: First, $10 in gold; second, one box (at seats) for "The Country Boy"; third, one pair of seats for "The Country Boy." The Grand Prizes are: First, $20 in gold; second, $10 in gold; third, $5 in gold; fourth, one box (at seats) for "The Country Boy."

Letters sent in this week include the following:

Is Nature-Taught.

Editor AMERICAN:

The country boy has the greater opportunity for success in life, because the country boy is Nature-taught. He enters adult life with a clear brain, a hope for success, and an all around knowledge of the Creator's way of doing things. He has been taught patience, industry and responsibility by his daily doings with the soil, the care of animals, the regularity of chores and the necessary discipline of a routine work and drudgery. He has developed self-reliance, independence of thought and action, natural honesty, and respect for hard work by having been compelled by his environment to invent new ways for amusement, devise new and better ways of doing things, and to cooperate with his associates in real team work. He enters city life, realizing he must depend upon himself. Therefore, he succeeds. Abraham Lincoln is certainly a great example.

Better Advantages Taught.

Editor AMERICAN:

By setting forth the opportunities afforded in a city boy, we may clearly see that he has a better advantage than the country boy. For, in the first place, he can keep in touch with the doings of the world by means of the numerous news papers; secondly, the city boy has a better educational advantage, for the city schools are better equipped than country schools, and there are night schools and the like for boys who work. Then, too, are the city libraries much better equipped than the poor country libraries. Third, the family of the city boy usually has both social and business connections in the city, and, as there, too, is an added advantage to him.

Thus from these few examples the city boy's greater advantage is shown. Hugh Bancroft, recently elected chairman of the Dock Board, would be a good example of a city bred boy.

ROBERT V. CLEARY.

No. 107 Adams street, Malden.

Editor AMERICAN:

The country boy is the honest, trustworthy lad of today. His good will and persevering way help him to the better success in life. He is generally very healthy and a healthy body means a healthy mind. Our greatest statesmen and Presidents of the past and present are an example of the energetic mind and the majority country bred. The city chap has the advantage over the country boy in education, but he is not grasping. The country boy strives hard to learn what little he has.

His mind is more clear, as he has not the temptations of the city. He has been taught the respect of his parents and others, and appreciates it. He is a good old mottoer, who has been his guide in life. The great example, as we all know, is that most honest country bred Abraham Lincoln.

HEARST PRAISED BY HAMMOND

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—"No. Positively no. I am not looking for any more Jameson raids," said John Hays Hammond, at the Virginia Hotel at Long Beach, where he is resting after a trip to the west coast of Mexico.

What caused his first remark was an inquiry as to the story that had come from Washington about his having been in Mexico as a representative of his friend, President Taft, and possibly having some connection with the revolution.

"No, I was not in Mexico for any other purpose than looking after a few thousand acres of land I have there and which I am working into irrigable land. I did not know there was a revolution there until I arrived here.

"Politics? All I can see to it is Taft, and I say that without blur. La Follette's boom has broken—if he ever had a boom to break.

"Roosevelt? Why, he is not a candidate, is he? Didn't he say he would not be a candidate?

"Is that irony, Mr. Hammond?" I asked.

"Can a fact be termed irony?" he answered, and then he laughed, which was another answer. "No, these others are merely sideshows; the big show has not opened yet."

"How about the Democrats?"

"Why, it is not for me to do the guessing for them.

"I do not know how strong a candidate he is at present, but if Mr. Hearst were nominated by that party he would, to my mind, make a good President.

"Mr. Hearst is a level-headed, safe man; the talk about his radicalism is simply ignorance, for everything he has been railed about has proven to be correct and wise."

"Will you be a candidate for Vice-President, Mr. Hammond?"

"I am too busy with my own affairs, and other people's affairs as trustee, to even consider politics personally," was the reply.

STAGE SUPER AT $1 A NIGHT, HAS OWN AUTOMOBILE

PHILADELPHIA, Feb.7.—Miss Adelele Ludlow of Louisville, Ky., well known in New York society, holds the record of being the only stage "super," who owns her own automobile. She is living in a $20 a day suite. Miss Ludlow earns $1 a night on the stage in "Everywoman." "I know money will not buy my way to fame," she said, "so I am acting as a super so I can study stage folk. I first went on as a super in Boston, and if they will allow me I propose to continue with the company."

LEARN HISTORY BY COUPON PLAN

The report of the Commissioner of Immigration for last year shows that large numbers of immigrants are still pouring into the United States. It is the same way every year. It is a romance of progress that few can afford to miss.

We are all immigrants in a sense, if we look far enough. The recent arrival can learn about his new fatherland if he gets the new, comprehensive history of the United States offered to its readers by the AMERICAN. One of the most reference books offered is Cressey's History of the United States, with ethnographic charts, maps and illustrated data. All you have to do is to clip one of the coupons appearing in the AMERICAN daily, add a few pennies and get this valuable history.

The question of immigration is dealt with very thoroughly. But immigration is not the only topic. There are hundreds of others which every new and old citizen ought to know about. That's why everybody who knows a good thing when they see it have snapped up the AMERICAN'S offer.

SLAVS RENEW WILSON PROTEST

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Polish citizens in this city continue their agitation against the libel derogatory to them, expressed in Governor Woodrow Wilson's "History of the American People."

Two more meetings are planned within the next few days, at which resolutions calling upon Governor Wilson of New Jersey to retract his attacks upon the Slavic peoples, similar to those passed at the gathering in South Brooklyn, will be issued.

On Friday evening, in Polish Athletes' Hall in East Twenty-second street, the Polish societies of lower Manhattan will unite with other races to whom Governor Wilson referred.

ROOSEVELT MAY AID MR. DARROW

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt may be asked to be a witness for Clarence Darrow, the labor lawyer who has been indicted on a bribery charge in connection with the trial of the McNamara brothers in this city. When it became known to-day that prominent men all over the nation would be asked to testify in behalf of Mr. Darrow's high standing, it was reported that Colonel Roosevelt was among the character witnesses. Attorney Earl Rogers, who represents Darrow, was undecided to-day.

"You see," he explained, "Roosevelt is a much better friend of Detective William J. Burns than he is of me, and I have not yet made up my mind as to the wisdom of asking him to testify."

OPERA'S FATE IN PEOPLE'S HANDS

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The rich and well-to-do people of Boston must support the opera if they expect it to continue in the next three years, Eben D. Jordan, who built the opera house and who has supported it out of his private purse during the first three years of its existence, is now turning it over to the public to decide whether the opera shall be a permanent institute.

Those who have received the greatest benefit from the opera are the box holders, and it is upon them that the responsibility has been placed.

In the double horseshoe many hundreds of millions of dollars are invested. Elsewhere in the city and its suburbs are scores of millionaires who were prevented from obtaining boxes three years ago because there were no enough to go around.

The directors have decided to ask a 25 to 50 per cent. increase in the prices of the boxes. This will increase the revenue from the boxes $50,000.

Th directors ask that public spirited persons subscribe an annual guarantee of $150,000 a year. Mr. Jordan will remit the rent of $60,000 per year during this period of three years.

The total increase in resources to be obtained in this way will be $200,000.

The total subscription for this season, including rent of boxes, is about $200,000. Receipts from sale of single seats during the season will probably be from $2,000,000 to $200,000.

As the total operating expenses of the opera company should not exceed $600,000 in any year, Mr. Jordan does not think the guarantee fund of $150,000 will be called upon to any extent, in which case it will be returned to the subscribers.

The new financial arrangement will make the Opera House perfectly independent of the demand for box office attractions and the company can work toward the production of the finest and most artistic things without fear that the cheap seats will not be sold.

M'NARY EVACUATION DAY CHIEF MARSHAL

The Evacuation Day Committee met at Gray's Hall, South Boston, President Edward J. Powers presiding, and chose ex-Congressman William S. McNary, formerly a lieutenant in the Ninth Massachusetts, as chief marshal. Past Commander J. Joseph O'Leary of the Spanish War Veterans will be chief of staff. Assurances were received from Governor Foss and Lieutenant-Governor Lunt that they will be present at the banquet, and acceptances were also received from Governor John A. Dix of Vermont, Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman James M. Curley and Colonel Kenny. It is said the Mayor expects that President Taft will participate in the parade.

THE EARLY GAME

By MORTON BIRGE.

The office boys' dear grandmamas will have to do again
One half-an-hour earlier than in preceding years,
And, as the office boys go out, we'll see the business men
In equal haste to watch the playing of the M'Alcers.

THIS Summer many men will say, when leaving home for work:
"I probably shall get through work some earlier to-day."
The wives will think that work is slack. But if the truth were known,
'Twill be because, at 3 o'clock, the umpire hollers: "Play!"

IT cuts one half-an-hour off from business. What of that?
We'll get home that much earlier, in easy time to dine.
Since McAleer says 3 o'clock that settles matters flat.
We love our work; but oh, you little baseball baby mine!

SORE ANKLES ASK CONNAUGHT AT WELLESLEY TO VISIT BOSTON

There are sore ankles at Wellesley College today, following an evening skating carnival for the collegians and friends on Lake Waban.

A broad space was cleared in the ice by the college janitors. Paths were marked out in many winding loops, pleasing to the artistic eyes of the girls, also giving an effect of distance. Japanese lanterns glimmered brightly and a big shore bonfire diffused warmth and comfort for those who wished to rest occasionally.

The refreshment menu was simple but effective. It included hot coffee, doughnuts and popcorn, a combination dear to the college girl's heart, but hardly approved by the department of hygiene and physical training.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—Bostonians have extended to the Duke of Connaught an invitation to visit Boston and also present a silver service. The Duke of Connaught made a very favorable impression on the people of the United States, said Louis C. Southard of Boston, past deputy grand master of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge and a member of the deputation of American Masons which presented fraternal greetings to the Duke.

SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

BOSTON HONORS DICKENS' NAME

Boston, of all American cities, should be particularly eager to honor the memory of Charles Dickens on the centenary of his birth today, for to Boston he found the kindred spirits of his universal genius.

Such is the view that Dr. Charles Carlton Black, Professor of English Literature at Boston University, and chairman of the Dickens Centenary Committee, expressed to a Boston AMERICAN reporter.

"Boston is the city," said Professor Black, "in which Dickens had what he loved to call his first American experience. Seventy years ago, almost to a day, he came to Boston, by way of Halifax, on his first visit to the States.

"Here he met Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier and Lowell—the best of America's intellectual guilds—and then he felt, there he the lambs and the heart of America.'

"Now the secret of Dickens' greatness is shown in a vow he made immediately after the publication and success of 'Pickwick Papers,' the volume which gave him his grip on his public. 'By God,' cried he, 'now in every line I write, I will strike a blow for the poor and the oppressed.'

Dickens a Liberator.

"Boston honors, then, not so much a novelist, though I stand ready to fit lances with anybody who says he was not a novelist, and a great one, but rather a man after its own heart and in line with its truest traditions, an emancipator of the downtrodden, a liberator of the common people.

"For Dickens is behind every movement in behalf of the poor that has been agitated since he wrote. He is behind the humane measures advocated by Mr. Lloyd-George, provides for workingmen and Home Rule for Ireland; he was behind the civil War, and the abolition movement; and he is behind the Lawrence strike.

"The instinct of Dickens is that of the revivalist. He came to America, not to make money—could he not have made four times as much at home at his desk?—but to give his personality to the peoples' cause.

"In the old Scotch phrase, he went about 'setting lost on fire.' By showing himself to the people and talking to them, he, like Gladstone, won them.

"Then, when he had written his 'American Notes,' and the tumult had risen and died away, after twenty-five years he planned his second American trip. He came to Boston and began his series of lectures in the city which and been the head and heart of the Civil War.

Illustrated Lecture Tonight.

At tonight's observance of the Dickens anniversary in Tremont Temple there will be an illustrated lecture as relative pertinently to Dickens' visits to America and addresses by Professor Silas Perry of Harvard, Edwin D. Mead, Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, Major Henry Haynie of Newton, Colonel D. F. Davey and Attorney John D. Long will preside, while Miss Frances Nevins will read selections from Dickens' books. Vocal and instrumental music will also feature the affair.

Co-operating with the committee in the celebration have been a large number of British, Scotch and Canadian societies, representatives from which will attend tonight's observances in Tremont Temple. Among these are the British Charitable Society, Scots' Charitable Society, Victoria Club, Caledonian Club, International Club, Canadian Club, British Naval and Military Veterans' Association, individual clans of the Order of Scottish Clans, Welsh Associates, Highland Dress Association, English Club, Canadian Club of Hawaii, Unicorn Club, Anglo-American Association of Massachusetts, Lady Associates of the Intercolonial Club, Daughters of St. George, Order of St. George, Independent Order of Sons of St. George, Boston Toria Nevinh Society, United Club, Newfoundland Benefit Association and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Manchester Unity.

This afternoon, in the People's Temple, Columbus avenue, a testimonial entertainment will be given, at which J. Wilder Fairbank will give an illustrated talk on "Why Charles Dickens Sleeps in Westminster Abbey," and Professor J. B. Taylor of Newton will give readings.

Wreaths Sent to Tomb.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The United States played a prominent part today in the national centennial celebration of the birth of Charles Dickens, the English novelist. Among the wreaths which were laid upon Dickens' tomb in Westminster Abbey were tributes from the St. Louis branch of the Dickens Fellowship and the All 'Round Dickens Club of Boston. Dickens lovers residing in Gadshill, where the novelist died dedicated the Dickens memorial in Rochester Cathedral.

The various ceremonies throughout the United Kingdom were marked by a simple show of affection and everywhere the creator of Mr. Pickwick and other famous characters was lauded as the "people's novelist" for the wrongs he exposed and the sunshine he brought into countless homes.

MAYOR PRESIDES AT REDBERRY CLUB

The Redberry Club, formerly one of the greatest political good-fellowship organizations in this city, was successfully revived at the Elks' Home, on Somerset street, after an interval of about five years, during which no meetings of the club have been held. The festivities of the reunion began with a dinner, at which Mayor Fitzgerald, who was also chairman of the reception committee, was toastmaster. The Mayor led the singing with "Sweet Adeline," and at the conclusion of the dinner a vaudeville entertainment was given.

ANNIVERSARY OF CHRISTIAN SOCIETIES

Today, in all sections of the world, more than 1,000,000 persons will observe the thirty-first birthday of the United Christian Endeavor Societies. In all churches where branches of this religious organization have been founded services will be held some time this week to commemorate this milestone. The United Christian Endeavor Society is the largest of the religious organizations affiliated with the Protestant church of today. Boston will feel a touch of this celebration, for in the First Presbyterian Church, at the corner of Berkeley street and Columbus avenue, the Christian Endeavor Unions of Greater Boston will celebrate.

HELEN H. BLAKE, WHO WILL MARRY INDIANA PASTOR

HELEN H. BLAKE

Miss Blake is a Cambridge girl, who is soon physical culture director of the Young Women's Christian Association at Augusta, Ga.

HELEN H. BLAKE TO WED PASTOR

Miss Helen H. Blake, daughter of Mrs. Helen Bisko and the late Clarence H. Blake of No. 9 Remington street, Cambridge—one of the most charming young women in the university town—is engaged to marry the Rev. Warren Goddard of La Porte, Ind., according to announcement made to-day.

Miss Blake graduated from Cambridge Latin School in 1908 and three years later from Wellesley, where she studied in the hygienic and physical culture department. She is now physical culture director of the Young Women's Christian Association in Augusta, Ga. She is a granddaughter of Rear Admiral John F. Murray of the United States Navy.

Rev. Warren Goddard formerly lived in Brookline. He is a son of the late clergyman of the same name, who was prominent in the New Church in Boston. He graduated from Rhode Island State College in 1903 and later from the New Church Theological School.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS ELECT OFFICERS

The annual election of officers of the Boston Postoffice Clerks' Mutual Benefit Association held in preparation for the annual ball in Mechanics Hall this evening, resulted in the re-election of all of the officers except the vice-president. The only contest of the election was over this office, which was won by Thomas H. Sennott of the letter room at the central postoffice. The officers re-elected are as follows: President, Terence J. O'Donnell of the general delivery, central postoffice; recording secretary, Joseph T. Hurley of the city delivery; financial secretary, James F. Brady of the registry division; treasurer, J. A. Barry of Essex station.

ACTRESSES AT HAPPY 20 BALL

Tomorrow evening at Odd Fellows' Hall, Tremont and Berkeley streets, the Happy Twenty, an organization composed of the senior members of the Boston Newsboys' Club, will hold their first annual ball. "Bud" Fisher, the creator of Mutt and Jeff, now appearing at Keith's, has promised the boys that he will positively be there to entertain the large crowd with some of his original cartoons.

Many of the most prominent actors and actresses now appearing at the leading theatres in town have volunteered their services toward making the first social event of the Happy Twenty a grand success. Among them are Miss Bessie McCoy, Miss Fannie Brice and Bert Williams of the Follies Company, Johnnie Webber, William Campbell and Miss Rose Rydell of the Gayety Theatre, the well-known Daly Trio, Eileen DeBoise, the prettiest girl in Boston, and her partner, Miss Della Flanegan, now appearing at the National, Henry Levine, the Boston Newsboys Club tenor, and Miss Sophia Bennett.

POLICE TO DANCE OR DIE IN PUMPS

After a heated discussion over whether the odds at the Somerville Police Relief Association ball in the State Armory on Highland avenue in that city tomorrow night should wear pumps or patent leather shoes, several Somerville policemen have been afflicted with cold feet. After covering their beat all day in a pair of deep-sea-going gum shoes they fear the committee's decision in favor of pumps will work much hardship. Nevertheless, they are resolved to dance or die.

When a member of the committee let fall the magic word "pumps" a day or two ago there was the beginning of trouble. Some members of the committee said, flat-footed, that patent leather pumps were not proper at all for a policeman's ball, but those who had introduced the pumps idea said they had actually seen them worn at balls where they had performed duty.

Then one member said he'd ask his wife and argued for more time so that he might send her into Boston shoe stores in quest of the latest data on the subject.

First National Bank Talks

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 7, 1912

Low Construction Safety

The low, fire-proof structure in which the Safe Deposit Vaults of the First National Bank are located is an important element of safety in event of a conflagration. There is no mass of masonry to topple upon them and preclude prompt access to their contents.

Everyone possesses valuable papers, securities, insurance policies, etc., the destruction of which would cause embarrassment if not actual financial loss. No surer means of safeguarding them exists than a box in these steel-lined fire and burglar proof vaults.

The cost is nominal—$10 a year and upwards.

Dear Sirs:

Replying to yours of December 28th, would say that we have within the past year installed several gas furnaces for hardening and tempering tools and machine parts. These appliances replaced coal burning furnaces and we are very glad to state that they have been highly efficient and we would not care to go back to coal again as a fuel for this class of work.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen: Regarding your inquiry as to the results obtained in the use of gas for heating our glue pots, used in the jewelry box department, beg to advise that for the three years we have done so we have found the gas perfectly satisfactory. When putting in our glue pots, we investigated carefully, weighing the different points between steam and gas, finally deciding in favor of the gas, and can frankly state that we have never been sorry. Would have no hesitation whatever in recommending its use to anybody. Truly yours.

LOVE'S WONDROUS POWER SHOWN IN 4 TRAGEDIES

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

Dan Cupid, the merry, mischievous little God of Love, who skims lightly over the surface of life, knowing only the beauty and the joy of living, is no true symbol of the love of man and woman.

For Dan Cupid's arrows are too often tipped with the poison of death, and for the very intensity of love's joy, there lurks in the background the more infinite possibilities of agony. They say that love is blind, so, perhaps, he never knows.

Four men and women have given their lives to love in the last twenty-four hours, taking in exchange, unquestioningly, that one final, absolute gift of death.

One man, when he realized that he could not save his wife, folded her in his arms and was swept to death with her, rather than save himself and desert her.

One woman died, killed herself, after learning that the man to whom she had been engaged for fourteen years was married and the father of a ten-year-old son.

Tremendous Power of Love.

The other man and woman killed themselves together, because their experiment in love had turned out a failure. They had ventured all, friends, home, luxury, reputation, for the sake of the love which they believed they born each other. When the disillusionment came and the brief infatuation snuffed out, they threw away life, too; it was valueless in comparison.

Four men and women are not many, out of the population of the world. Their deaths do not furnish a basis for any generalities about the comparative loving men of men and women. But the variety of motives which led to these four sacrifices suggests again the tremendous power of the little god of the barbed arrows.

Eldridge Stanton, died heroically, generously, wholesomely at Niagara Falls. There was nothing of heart break or morbid grief. He went to death as a strong man may, absorbed in saving a woman's life. He and his wife were on the ice bridge when it shivered and broke away from the shore. He snatched at the rope thrown him, to fasten it around his wife's waist, but his hands were numb with cold, apparently, without even realizing the possibility of saving his own life without them, he took the woman he loved in his strong arms and together they were swept to death.

Jennie Arenburg's Fate.

At the very moment that the icy waters swirled up about this man and woman, hurling them powerless to destruction, Jennie Arenburg, a Boston working girl, was fighting against a storm of grief, even more terrible in its isolation.

She had discovered that the love which in fourteen years of constant intimacy had come to be the greatest thing in her life was a cruel hoax. The man who had courted her, who had promised to marry her, who had wooed her for fourteen years, had been married to another woman for twenty years, and was the father of a ten-year-old son. Bravely determining that there should be no possibility of a misunderstanding, or of an injustice to the man she had loved, Miss Arenburg steeled herself to the ordeal of meeting the woman whom her lover had honored above her. She found the woman, bearing her admirer's name—Mrs. John Benway—the name that had come to look upon as her own. She met this other woman's son.

Somehow or other, blind and dazed with grief, she groped her way back to her own rooms. Mocking memories maddened her. She could hear the floor cracking as he came down the hall, and she could feel the magic presence of him as he threw open the door and came across the room. Walks through leafy, Summer pathways, delightful on moonlight nights, trips to the cafes about the city, nights at the theatre with a little supper in her own room afterward, the memories crowded upon her. Through them all was the suffocating desire to see him, just once more to give him a chance to explain somehow.

No Explanation Possible.

But the girl knew that there was no possible explanation. The man who had kept her contented year after year with the stereotyped drudgery of a waitress while she waited patiently for him to marry her, doling out to her such fragments of love and happiness as were left from the demands of his own home life, the man who had lied to her and deceived her—there was no explanation for him to make, there was no reason for seeing him again.

With the dear day dreams of fourteen years all stripped away the revolver ended her life.

She left no word for the man. She wrote to her aunt:

"Dear Aunt: I can't face the world alone. I am going to end it all now. JENNIE."

This was the only word she left.

The man who had been her only admirer for fourteen years found her waiting for him. He left himself in Miss Arenburg's room. For the first time in fourteen years she did not greet him. He was terribly late.

The other man and woman died together. She was once the wife of a millionaire and he was a young glass works assistant. Deluded by a passing infatuation for an attractive young man, the former Mrs. Walter Saydam, Jr., left her husband and her beautiful Long Island home, defied all the conventions of her world, scandalized her friends and her family to give herself up to the love of this boy. They were married a month ago, and since then, the dull monotony of every day life, has helped wick the bubble of their infatuation.

Realization Too Late.

The impulsive young woman realized at last that she had thrown away her most precious treasure, the love of the man she really loved. But she had realized it too late. She had dragged him through the distasteful grime of divorce courts and publicity. She had married this boy. It was too late to go back.

Like the lonely girl who fought out her battle between life and death in her private apartment, Mrs. Noble came to the decision that life without the man she loved was not worth living.

One woman recklessly threw her happiness away, and her life and her suitor's life after it. The other woman could, regrimly, after fourteen years of hoping and waiting, chose death alone.

The two men chose death with the women they loved rather than life without them.

To all four, love was the greatest thing in the world, greater than life, greater than death. With love snatched away, life was nothing worth while, and hoping, perhaps, for oblivion, perhaps for a happier land where the mistakes of this world are set right once more, they chose to plunge into the unknown.

For the Children

To Keep Their Digestion Prefect Nothing Is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Trial Package Sent Free.

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well, take Stuart's Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive, should use the tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. H. Crotsley, 538 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'tablets' and she drops everything else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a short time ago, who despaired of the life of her baby, was so delighted with the results from giving the child these tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

Gentlemen:—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my two-months-old baby, which was sick and puny, and the doctors said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large, sweet lozenges in the box, and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life.

MRS. W. T. DETHLOPE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897.

HENRY KARIS.

Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N. Y.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large, sweet tablets in every box. Full-sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ailing in any way, regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles, whether in adults or infants.

A trial package will be sent, if you will write F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

I must say that KUTICO is the best thing I have ever used for hair trial.
HENRY C. KEGEL,
508 Howard Ave., Pottsville, Pa.

I tried your KUTICO Hair Tonic and it made my hair grow so fast I could hardly get it cut. I used your remedy and KUTICO is all I wanted.
MRS. O. TIGHMAN,
Denton, Caroline Co., Md.

I have much pleasure in writing to you about KUTICO. I think it is a blessing. It does all you claim. I have been using it for two months and my hair is growing rapidly.
SUSIE CLARK,
Garrysburg, N. C.

My hair is a proof of the merits of KUTICO. It is getting nice and thick and improving in every way. Everybody is admiring the growth and appearance of my hair and ask how I did it.
MRS. CAREY V. MASSEY,
Port Deposit, Md.

I have been very suspicious of hair tonics generally in the past. I tried KUTICO and the results are very gratifying. I am especially pleased to find it clears the scalp.
CAPT. T. LOWERY,
Greely, Kan.

I am a barber and used KUTICO on a man who had been bald for 25 years. He now has a nice growth of hair. It is a fine preparation, and no mistake.
W. J. GREENE,
West Shokeen, N. J.

KUTICO
stopped my hair falling, and I have not used it long. I followed the simple instructions to no infinite satisfaction.
MRS. G. W. MURDOCK,
Orland, Glenn Co., Cal.

I used three bottles of KUTICO and it stopped the terrible itching scalp from which I suffered for years. My hair looks more lively than it has ever before. I have used lots of remedies, but none like this.
F. H. McCALL,
Avletsville, Pa.

"AND THAT'S WHAT THEY ALL SAY"

The regular retail price of these large bottles of KUTICO is 75 cents, but to prove its wonderful merits as a hair beautifier, tonic and restorer, the Riker-Jaynes drug stores everywhere are giving the readers of the Boston American this unheard of opportunity of buying this wonderful remedy at only about ONE-THIRD its regular price.

Get Yourself a New Head of Hair

Nearly twenty years of success stand back of every bottle. It is totally different from anything else you have ever tried. Contains no oil, grease, lead, silver, sulphur or anything of a harmful nature.

From youth to old age, KUTICO can be used with the utmost pleasure and advantage. Its principal uses are to beautify the hair, keep the scalp free from dandruff and promote a healthy growth; to prevent and stop hair falling out, allay itching and irritation of the scalp and maintain a luxuriant, natural appearance of the hair.

KUTICO is not an experiment. It has received "golden opinions from all sorts of people." It is delightfully fragrant, clean, effective. A hair tonic and dressing for refined and particular people. The first application will make your scalp feel good and will be certain to win your approbation and your recommendations.

MISS ARNOLD REPORTED SAFE

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Dorothy Arnold has been found. Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty announced to-day that the beautiful young heiress, daughter of Francis B. Arnold, a millionaire importer, who has been missing since December 12, 1910, is now on her way to New York.

The discovery of the young woman—if it is confirmed—clears up the most remarkable mystery of its kind that has interested the country in years. Commissioner Dougherty refused to-day to tell the details, but he said that he was sure of his facts.

"I am positive," he said. "I am satisfied. We have notified her father and he will meet her."

Detectives Board Train.

Notwithstanding the positive attitude assumed by Dougherty, the young woman could not be found by reporters and detectives on the train which it was said she had boarded at North Philadelphia for New York. Dougherty sent Detectives Kalt and Flanders over to Manhatten Junction, N. J., to meet her.

According to the police, Miss Arnold left North Philadelphia at 9:14 a. m. to do some shopping in New York. This was the train that was boarded by the detectives, who could find no trace of her until it reached Jersey City. At Jersey City Francis B. Arnold, father of the young woman met the train. He scanned the faces of those who left, but could not pick out his daughter. He then returned to his home.

Later Inspector Hughes said that the girl believed to be Miss Arnold got off the train at Newark. The inspector said he knew where she had gone, and that before the day was over Arnold would be given an opportunity to see her and say whether or not she was his missing daughter. The train conductor, however, was questioned and he said that no one answering her having seen any such passenger. He was positive that no one resembling Miss Arnold had left the train.

Philadelphia Says "No."

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 7.—The Philadelphia police doubt that Dorothy Arnold has been found. Superintendent of Police Taylor admitted that a girl at first thought to be be the missing New York heiress had been located here, but said it turned out to be a case of mistaken identity. A query at the detective bureau brought forth the reply: "We found a girl, but she is not Dorothy Arnold."

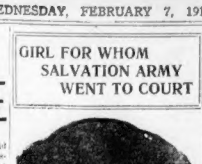
MACFARLAND IS SENTENCED TO DIE

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 7.—Justice Gummere to-day overruled the motion for a new trial made in behalf of Allison M. Macfarland, convicted of murdering his wife, and sentenced Macfarland to death in the electric chair.

Doctor's Best Formula
Breaks Severest Cold in a Day and Cures Any Curable Cough.

This has been published here for several winters and has proven the quickest and most reliable formula combination for coughs and colds. "From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce Concentrated Pine compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake well and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age. Be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. Each half pint bottle comes complete with measuring top case. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't experiment with preparations because of cheapness. It doesn't pay to fool with a bad cold.

GIRL FOR WHOM SALVATION ARMY WENT TO COURT



AGNES BLUTE

Agnes Blute, who named Captain Harriet Blackman of Salvation Army as her guardian.

A legal fight for the custody of twenty-year-old Agnes Blute, who named Captain Harriet Blackman of the Salvation Army as her guardian, has been settled by the appointment of Edwin B. Mulready, commissioner of probations, to fill that office.

Judge Grant of the Suffolk County Probate Court called lawyers for both sides to his lobby today, where an agreement was made to place the girl in the custody of Mr. Mulready. The probation commissioner will delve into the case of the girl and will later find a place for her keeping.

The petition of Captain Harriet Blackman of the Salvation Army to be appointed legal guardian, was dismissed by the court, and the guardianship of the girl refused the captain of the army.

CHINESE WAR IS CALLED OFF

NANKING, Feb. 7.—Peace has finally been declared in China and revolutionary and imperialist traders united today in the belief that there will be no more fighting. The complete cessation of hostilities was taken upon suggestion of President Sun Yat Sen and the imperialists seized upon the proposition eagerly.

Both the republican and Manchu governments are impoverished and cannot continue the war.

Imperialist troops are being withdrawn from the front.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn cases in 24 hours. This recipe makes a pint—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much cough syrup as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water and stir two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SAY HEARST IS WELCOME

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 7.—The Atlanta Journal publishes the following editorial:

In having purchased the Atlanta Georgian, which he will immediately operate as a part of his circuit of papers, William Randolph Hearst has recognized the vital role this city and State and section now play in the life of the common country.

His action is in line with that of capitalists and investors in the nation ever, who have come to discern in the Southland the Union's most fertile field of opportunity and profit. It is another omen that southward lies the course of progress and development.

Mr. Hearst now conducts newspapers in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is his announced policy to devote his latest acquisition the Georgian, to the upbuilding of this city and State and section. In this spirit he will be welcomed.

It is a distinctive tribute to the prestige and growth of Atlanta that it has enlisted the interest of such a newspaper enterprise. It is our cordial wish that the advent of Mr. Hearst may truly work for the welfare of Atlanta and Georgia and the South.

The following telegrams have been received by Mr. Hearst among many others since Mr. Hearst's acquisition of the Atlanta Georgian:

To W. R. Hearst, New York:

Accept my sincere congratulations on your acquisition of the Georgian. The heart of the southland is the best field for your newspaper and can be found on the continent, and your entrance in the news arena will be noted with great pleasure by many of our most progressive people.

LOUIS B. MAGID,
Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 7.

William Randolph Hearst, New York:

Our people welcome you to Atlanta. Your influence will help to make even a greater Atlanta and South.

JEROME JONES,
Editor Journal of Labor.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 7.

William Randolph Hearst, New York:

Atlanta Typographical Union, No. 48, extends felicitations to you and trusts your newly acquired property will prove as profitable to you as we feel sure you will make it to the South. We bid you welcome to the Southland and pledge our hearty co-operation.

THE JOY OF LIVING IS THE HERITAGE OF THE LEAN. I WAS STOUT—AND I KNOW.

Mr. friends were charitable when they called it obesity; others referred to me as being STOUT. Some did, I reckon, but I always thought I was just plain fat, which is unsightly, too, are equally miserable if you are too stout.

To reduce your weight you must find the cause. You must get at the root of things.

I FOUND THE CAUSE—THE REST WAS EASY.

Before I succeeded, I tried everything within reason and some things beyond reason. It was maddening—fasting.

All I had to do was to remove the cause, and I never under oath that by my simple method without drugs, medicine, harmful exercises, or starvation diet, I reduced my weight 17 pounds in five weeks, and guarantee that I can do the same for you. I have a simple, pleasant, safe and sure system. Let me tell you about it. Nothing to buy. No harmful treatment; even a child can use it without harm. Then this marvelous combination home treatment. I succeeded because I had found the right way. I can now climb to the summit of Pike's Peak with ease. I could not do that until I had taken off 37 pounds of my unsightly, weight.

If you are interested in your own happiness and health, if you want to be slender, I will tell you how to reduce your weight. Nature's Way.

I have printed a book for you entitled, "Weight Reduction Without Drugs," which I am giving away without charge, prepaid to you, so that you may know of my successful method and be able to permanently reduce your weight any amount up to 50 pounds, without harmful exercises or starvation diet, drugs or medicine. "Weight Reduction Without Drugs." It is yours for the asking, and I will be glad to send it to you, postage prepaid.

I have found that the best way to know happiness is to give it.

GIRL'S CAPTIVES HELD BY COURT

William Murray of Roxbury and Harry Warren of Malden, young men who were captured through the presence of mind of Mis. Bertha Smith, a stenographer, in snapping a catch on the office door of he Essex Kid Company at Western avenue and Federal street, Lynn, denied to Judge Lummus in Lynn police court today Miss Smith's story that one of them hadtried to rob the safe in the company office. They were held in $500 bail while the police look into their records.

Mss Smith said that while one of the men talked to her, the other was close to the safe, which held several hundred dollars. She heard a click as if the inner door were being opened.

To young woman's screams brought assistance from the salesroom, which adjoin the office, and both men were ·ercovered and turned over to the police. Mis Smith was so wrought up over her experience that she is under a doctor's care at her home, No. 347 Western avenue.

Ir two men entered the office where Mr Smith was alone typewriting and said for work. The girl directed them thrgh a closed door to the salesroom, whe her brother, Frederick Smith, the saynitendent, was. Her back was to thdoor, brt she heard it close and went on ith her work. The safe stood near sussex partly open.

Sh turned nsxln suddenly, however, wh she heard the luner doors of the safe click. Then, it is alleged, she saw ouof the men trying to open a small ca drawer in the safe, while the other ma moved nowhere to be seen.

A next moment Superintendent Smith and George Peckham appeared, when the pired would-be thieves put up a stiff fight.

TAFT OPENS WAR ON ROOSEVELT

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. — President Taft's real fight against Theodore Roosevelt has begun. The first gun was fired on the floor of the House by Congressman McCall of Massachusetts, who took 5,000 words to give his reasons for voting for the Norris-Nelson-Bristow-Poindexter resolution introduced two days ago. Boiled down, the reasons are Theodore Roosevelt.

No one doubts that McCall was set on by Taft, directly or indirectly; no one doubts that the speech of McCall will be followed by other and more bitter speeches when the resolution appears.

The President has fully awakened to the Roosevelt menace. He intends to use all his great power, in and out of Congress, to put an end to it if he can.

His managers have perfected their organization and are getting up steam on the right pressure. The Democrats will probably hold off the "no third term" resolution, but every organization Republican will vote for it when it comes out of committee.

Word has been sent to all Republican Congressmen that unless they stop flirting with Roosevelt managers they can expect no further favors from the White House. Every method of persuasion by force known to big politics will be used on office-holders and prospective office-holders.

There is an Administration spy in most of the Roosevelt camps. Just to give the Insurgent wonders a jolt, Lee S. Quarrel about a story has been set afoot that Roosevelt told Congressman Nicholas Longworth on the occasion of the latter's visit to Oyster Bay that the Jolosvelt very much like a Democratic year and that 1916 would be plenty of time for a regular Roosevelt boom.

The speech of McCall was not as venomous as was expected. He alluded to Roosevelt only once. That was when he quoted the former President's announcement on the night of his election that he would never again be a candidate.

MILLIONAIRES FOR ROOSEVELT

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—To offset any pres tige the Taft movement may gain in Chicago through the organization of a Taft club by representatives of large business institutions here, the Roosevelt boomers have started a Roosevelt millionaire club.

The word millionaire is eliminated from the title of the new organization, but the fact that practically every one of the officers including fifty honorary vice-presidents is in the millionaire class, was a subject of comment as soon as the organization of the Chicago Roosevelt Club was announced. The new club already has as members many of the leading business and professional men of the city. Through the club a fight for Roosevelt delegates to the national convention will be financed in every precinct.

Governor Stubbs of Kansas arranged to-day to take the stump in Illinois next week to urge a State delegation for Roosevelt. At least a dozen big meetings will be arranged probably all for the Kansas Governor.

Governor Bass of Vermont, also notified the Roosevelt boosters here that he will come to Illinois in a short time to tour the State in behalf of Roosevelt.

DALLAS AFTER BIG AUTO RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Dallas "boomers," who came to Boston last Summer and captured the annual convention of the Advertising Association, are now making an effort to secure the Vanderolt Cup race for that city.

The Automobile Club of that city is laying plans for the construction of a special speedway, which will be suitable for the holding of such a contest and will in a very short time make formal application for this big event.

Dallas claims to have a much smoother and faster course than the one now controlled by Savannah, and one which is not so long, which, of course, means greater interest to the spectators.

Although Savannah has as yet failed to make known her wishes as regards the Vanderolt Cup race, there is good reason to believe that she will not give up the contest without a struggle.

The impression on the last race in Savannah was that the Georgia city would not care for the contest another year, but from what was heard at Chicago there is reason to believe that Savannah is still anxious to hold the big contest in that city.

* * *

Volumes have been written regarding utility features of the automobile, but most of us, after reading the carefully written books and toss them aside and we have not sufficient knowledge to memorize statistics. We prefer to draw our conclusions from concrete illustrations. This was strikingly instanced recently in Chicago.

A solid stream of humanity was hurrying through Congress street from the automobile show intent only on snatching a table in the Pompeian room and escaping the cold drizzle that froze as soon as it touched the street.

But at the corner of Michigan avenue, only half the pleasure seekers halted to watch a lonely, frightened horse attached to a United States mail wagon struggling up the centre of the street.

On either side of him automobiles of every description. Weed chains on all four wheels, were flashing past at the rate of a hundred a minute and traveling at the rate of twenty miles to the horse's one; threading their way through traffic, whisking around corners and carrying their loads of pleasure or merchandise quickly and safely to their destination. After toiling twenty minutes the horse fell.

EMPIRE CLUB MUSICALE.

The British Empire Club will give a musicale at the next quarterly meeting of the British Charitable Society in Young's Hotel Friday evening. President Bentley will preside at the business meeting of the club and after that a social time will be spent by the members.

MEET TICKETS ARE ALL SOLD

All reserved seat tickets for the B. A. A. indoor meet, which takes place in Mechanics Building next Saturday night, have been sold. The tickets have been purchased by the members of the B. A. A. and their friends.

The only public sale of tickets will be at Mechanics Building Saturday evening. These tickets will entitle the holder to standing room in the second balcony. The number of tickets is limited and it will be a case of first come first served.

In all 8,000 people will witness the meet. There is a possibility that several indoor world records will be broken. A great deal of interest is being displayed in the Hunter mile, three-mile race, 45-yard hurdle race and forty-yard dash. Only top notchers will be permitted to take part in these events.

Kivlin is confident that he will again be returned the winner in the Hunter mile. He has been running in excellent form this season and should set a merry pace for the rest of the field.

Cyrar Hedlund is Kivlin's most dangerous opponent. The former Brookline Gym. star is out to take a fall out of the New York crack.

Many of the Gotham athletes will be in town tomorrow in order to rest up in preparation for the meet.

FINE RACE CARD AT DORCHESTER

One of the largest snow racing cards of the season will be pulled off at the Blue Parkway, Milton, by the Dorchester Driving Club Saturday afternoon. One of the features of the racing will be the event between Michael McDermott's star gelding Camello and Horace Gallop's Earl King.

The annual stag party and entertainment of the club will take place on the evening of February 26, in the club headquarters in Washington hall, Codman square.

Harvard Football Schedule Complete; First Game Sept. 28

Harvard's football schedule for 1912 is now complete. The announcement of the game with Vanderbilt to be played at the Stadium, November 9, is the one which has heretofore been taken by the Carlisle Indians, has filled the gap in the schedule.

The Vanderbilt team, which played at New Haven in 1910, and which would have played in the Stadium last Fall had it not been understood that a game had been arranged with the Indians on the date submitted to Dr. Dudley by Harvard, is reported of a game in the Stadium next Fall.

For several seasons Vanderbilt has been recognized as the best team in the Southern district, and two years ago the eleven played a 0-to-0 game with Yale on the latter's field.

The university always has been eager to meet Harvard, and the Southern eleven would be a splendid attraction in the Stadium next Fall.

Nine Games on Schedule.

Harvard will play nine games of football this year, as did in 1911. While the nationals being scheduled for Saturday afternoons.

A few years ago all of the mid-week games except one were cut out, but last fall there were no Wednesday games at all.

While the more important games on the 1912 schedule have not been officially submitted to the Harvard Athletic committee, the Crimson schedule has been arranged, and will differ little from that of last Fall.

Of the nine opponents Harvard had last year, seven have been retained on the list, and the games with these will be played on the same relative dates as in 1911.

The teams that are retained are Holy Cross, Amherst, Williams, Brown, Dartmouth, Princeton and Yale.

Last year the Harvard team opened its season on Soldiers Field against the latest College team, but this Fall the Crimson will play University of Maine instead.

Season to Open September 28.

Harvard's season will start Saturday, September 28, nine days after college opens, but of course there will be the usual preliminary practice prior to the game. The date will be filled by University of Maine, October 5. Holy Cross will play on the Stadium, Williams the following October 12 and Amherst October 19.

The annual game with Brown will be played on the last Saturday of October as usual, Robinson's teams being booked to appear on Soldiers Field on October 26.

The following Saturday, November 2, the Princeton team will be at Cambridge, the match being the first between the two teams on Harvard soil since 1896. Then follows Vanderbilt on November 9, the game with Dartmouth on November 16 closing the season in the Stadium, as Harvard will go to New Haven for the last game of the campaign on November 23.

The latter part of the schedule—that is, the matches on the list after the Amherst game—have not been finally agreed upon, but this holding on the dates was made simply that Harvard would not tie itself down to such a hard schedule as in 1911, provided the football rules were changed so as to make it impossible for the Crimson to meet the many obligations it met last year.

Maine Takes Place of Bates.

There was nothing done to the rules, however, that necessitated Harvard dropping any of its 1911 opponents, because of football itself; and except that Vanderbilt has taken Carlisle's place and Maine will play here instead of Bates, the Crimson's schedule is the same as last year.

Since the close of the 1911 playing season a change has been made in Harvard's football committee, which after the season of 1907 was formed to search for a football coach and to effect a good football organization generally. This committee, appointed Percy Haughton coach in 1908, and after two seasons he signed a contract to coach the team for three more years at $5,000 a year.

This football committee comprises seven graduate members and the captain of the Harvard varsity team. At present five of the original seven members remain on the committee, these being J. W. Farley, '79, Percy D. Haughton, '99, Andrew Marshall, '04, Wilbur T. Gannon, '05L, and George R. Fearing, '93.

The two new members are R. W. P. Brown, '08, and Herbert H. White, '93. Brown played at Harvard in '05, '06 and '07, and coached the Harvard second team successfully for years before Bill Reid came to Cambridge as coach in 1905 and 1906, during which seasons Brown was Reid's right-hand man.

The committee as it now stands is very strong, but will have few troubles for a year at least. After 1912, however, the question of a coach will again arise, for by no means is it certain that Mr. Haughton will renew his contract after five seasons of work.

BOWLERS ROLL EARLY STRINGS

The large number of filled out entry cards being returned to the Bowling Editor plainly shows that the bowlers all over New England have begun in earnest the rolling of their five consecutive strings in the preliminary or qualifying round in the Boston AMERICAN Bowling Championship Contest.

The date for closing of this round ends Wednesday, February 21, and it is pleasing to note that with more than one thousand of the best bowlers in New England entered so many are willing to help by getting in their cards early and thus avoid the crush of sorting and indexing the scores necessary if the bowlers waited till the last days before tackling the pins.

In today's AMERICAN appears the last bunch of entries. It will be noted that among them is that of Bill Beatty, which the foremost bowler of candlepins in the last fifteen years. Undoubtedly the present popularity of the candlepin sport is to a great measure due to Beatty traveling throughout New England in the early days of the pin game, giving exhibitions and playing matches. The list of entries:

Other entries are Harry Lane, Dorchester; Earl H. Griffin, Dorchester; Joseph Bolton, Dorchester; William R. Sweet and George Harper, Boston; E. G. Dalton, Chas. L. Dalton, Jos. Charles Dickens as a Boy

By THOMAS TAPPER

CHARLES DICKENS was born one hundred years ago, on the 7th of February, 1812. He died at the age of fifty-eight.

Raised in the midst of poverty and debt, with no advantage of family fortune or connection, he worked (and wrote what he thought) and in a few years his name was known in every part of the globe where the foot of civilized man rested.

His father was John Dickens, a government clerk. Charles, described as a "very queer small boy," read again and again the few books in the family library. They were such books as would fire the imagination of a sensitive boy. Here are the "best books" of his childhood:

1. Roderick Random.
2. Peregrine Pickle.
3. Humphrey Clinker.
4. Tom Jones.
5. The Vicar of Wakefield.
6. Don Quixote.
7. Gil Blas.
8. Robinson Crusoe.
9. Henry the Fourth.

In the boyhood of this great man, there was not much time for book reading, and he turned to these volumes between times.

He knew early in life the knock on the door of the man who comes to collect a bill, and he also grew familiar with the need of going to the pawnbroker's shop.

The family moved to London from Portsmouth when Dickens was born, and he went to work when he was ten years old, in a shoe blacking shop. He pasted the labels on the bottles and tied them up in packages. He became so skilful in this that a crowd used to gather in the street to watch his quick movements. Incidentally, he walked four miles to his work in the morning, and four miles back at night of —wages one dollar and seventy-five cents per week, which allowed him two meals a day; not three, but two.

When Dickens was eleven years old, his father's affairs came to so bad a condition that he was put in jail for debt. He went to the Marshalsea prison. All the family moved in to live with him, except Charles, who boarded with an old lady near by, whom he afterwards introduced into Dombey and Son, as Miss Pipchin.

In his spare time he visited the family in jail, and gained at first hand that knowledge of a debtor's prison, of which he has told the details with such force and accuracy that we have some of the horrors of it at least.

Speaking once of his childhood, Dickens said:

"I know that I worked from morning until night, with common men and boys, a shabby child. I know that I longed about the streets, insufficiently fed. I know that I might have been a little robber or a little vagabond. How much I suffered is beyond my power to tell. But I kept my own counsel and I did my own work."

If anyone who reads this will, in all circumstances, follow the simple rule "Keep his own counsel and do his own work," he need look for no other. This rule translated into shorter form is: "Think hard for yourself, and keep busy."

More young men and women fail in life by not obeying that rule, than fall from any other cause.

Dickens left the blacking shop and went to work for a lawyer (enjoying a little schooling between); later he went to another lawyer's office at Gray's Inn. Here he worked as hard as ever and drew on Saturday night $3.75 for his week's wages. But his wages were higher than that amount, for he was observing, seeing everything, and storing it up to fill the pages of those books he was to write later.

In other words, he was not "doing only the job, but studying everything his eyes fell upon, and remembering it for future use. This seems to have been his second rule.

If the young men and women of 1912 are watching the clock, and tending to business only when the boss is looking, they are doomed to be not types of Charles Dickens, but of the great crowd of those who get little because they give little.

The boy next became a reporter. He was then sixteen. He learned shorthand, and soon had the reputation of being one of the best reporters of the day.

Why?

Because he studied it in the same spirit that inspired him to paste labels on the blacking bottles; namely, so well that a crowd collected outside the window to see him do it.

Now, to the list of books that Dickens read as a boy, we must add to the titles given above the following:

10. The Marshalsea Prison.
11. The Blacking Shop.
12. Mr. Jones' School.
13. The Lawyer's Office at Gray's Inn.
14. The Streets of London.

And the last five probably taught him more and showed him more than he could have found in all the books in the British Museum.

The Head Waitress

By HANK.

"YOU ain't got no English in you, has you?" asked the Head-waitress of The Steady Customer as he dolefully speared the last bean on the plate.

"I believe that centuries ago one of my ancestors was a Duke or something of the kind," he replied, "but I have never boasted about it."

"I shouldn't if I was you," said the Head-waitress. "It ain't nothing to brag about. I used to think that them English was a pretty good sort, seeing as how they come pretty near speakin' our language and living as we do, but I'm through with them."

"Something evidently has occurred to upset your mental equipoise," suggested the Steady Customer.

"I never heard it called that before," replied the Headwaitress, "I should say that it was my temper that was upset. The other afternoon I was up to my sister's who married one of them fellers that earns his living here and lives up on his leisure time moakin' over his fate. A lot of his countrywomen was in to call on my sister for 'tea' as they call it, although the only tea I seen came from the corner in a can and had suds all over the top.

The Poor Eagle

"Well, after they had the can of 'tea' filled several times, my sister borrowin' ten cents from me for the third trip to the corner, they started in pannin' America. It didn't take me long to understand why the great American lord didn't get no ears that you can see. From the panics I seen pore bird was got from these English dames who must have been burned right off long ago. I sat still and didn't say nothing for quite awhile, but, finally one old dame who was dressed up to look like a chicken with the feathers rubbed the wrong way, pipes up with a spiel that sent my pulse gallopin' madly around the room hollerin' for air.

"'It must have been fierce,' said the Steady Customer.

"'Fierce was its middle name,' said the Headwaitress. 'Seems as how she was out visitin' one of hers, an American, the other day, and was asked to stay to dinner. Her friend asked her if she would like to have any particular kind of dessert, and she answers that she would like to have 'roly-poly.'

"'An' what do you think?' she tells us, 'my friend said she never heard of a roly-poly? The idea! What do you think of a country that hasn't any roly-polys? Why the merest child in England knows what a roly-poly is. America and Americans are certainly exceedingly crude, and backward.'

"'Well, that was too much for me. 'Roly-poly,' says I to her, 'why we know what roly-poly was before England was on the map. Roly-poly? Why where do come from in Connecticut, they eat roly-polys morning, noon and night. There's one town up there that does nothin' else but turn out roly-polys. Didn't you ever hear of Poll's theatress? I asked her. She said she never had. 'That's where you show your ignorance,' said I, 'that was named after Mr. Roly Poll, an American, and the inventor of the roly-poly.'

"Then I stopped for I was out of breath. My sister was looking kinder mortified, but I didn't care, and soon afterward the company broke up. Just as the dame who I had had the argument with was going out she said to me very sweetly, 'And do you know what a roly-poly is?'

A Confession

"'Do you know?' says I. 'Of course,' says she. 'Then what's the use of me tellin' you?' I answers back, and she goes out saying something to her friends about me being 'impossible.'"

"Well, Kiddo," said the Steady Customer, "it looks as if you won out."

"Yes," said the Headwaitress, "I did, but I'd like to ask you something confidential."

"Go ahead," said the Steady Customer.

"Well, what the dickens is a roly-poly?"

"Darned if I know," said the Steady Customer.

MR. DAVENPORT BELIEVES

Resinol Soap and Ointment Are Just as Necessary in the Home as Matches

Here's the way he puts it:

"Permit me to testify to the many virtues of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for general use in the family. I do this without solicitation, not for the benefit of the manufacturers, but for those who may need a remedy for the numberless ills which I know positively they have cured in my own family. Resinol is the never failing article resorted to by my wife for the many bruises, chafings, burns and other accidents of the children, and has been our cure-all for years. I myself have used it in many cases of irritation and inflammation and have invariably been relieved almost instantly. We should as soon think of being without matches in our house as to be without Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap.

"BENJAMIN RUSH DAVENPORT,
"Philadelphia, Pa."

It's not merely the laymen who endorse Resinol Ointment, but the medical profession, because it has a wider range of usefulness than any other external application. For erysipelas, impetigo, hives, tetter, chilblains, burns, boils, itching piles, pimples, blackheads, irritation and inflammation, eczema, milk-crust, scald head, ringworm, rashes, itch and other eruptive skin diseases, likewise chilblains, chapped hands, cracked and bleeding lips, it is far superior to anything else. It is indispensable to home, hospital and physician.

Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick is best for the skin, because its soothing, healing lather counteracts irritation.

All druggists sell the Resinol preparations. The ointment comes in two sizes —50c and $1.00. For free samples write to Department 10G, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

What to Wear and How to Wear It

Valuable Advice to Women by Mary Mannering on the Way to Dress Stylishly Without Extravagance

By MARY MANNERING

DO we women ever get beyond the clothes question?

Perhaps some aspiring souls have succeeded in not caring about what kind of garments decked their mortal bodies or how those garments were cut and fitted, but I have not reached those heights as yet, and I hope between ourselves that I never shall.

To me even the most exalted souls lose something of their power if they are clad in unsightly clothes, and I'm sure I always sympathized with the little heathen child whose education had been undertaken by a high-minded and self-sacrificing woman missionary. When in later years the child was asked if she remembered her teacher, she said: "Oh, yes! she was the one who wore such funny hats!"

"Alas for all her good intentions! Her instruction was forgotten.

The good precepts she tried to impress upon her charge fell upon idle ears while the child's entire attention was riveted upon the one ridiculous and hence interesting point of her teacher's apparel, her hat.

Every actress realizes the tremendous importance which clothes play in making or marring her success on the stage.

A Momentous Question

Tails is especially true in plays where the frock question seems to the audience to be a very important one. Of course in costume plays, plays which occur at some historic or picturesque period, there are the frocks and costumes of the epoch give the old-time atmosphere.

Take the modern play, however, and the clothes question is really more difficult, for the actress tries to suggest her character, her mood and her occupation by her gowns, and, naturally she wants to look well besides.

The ideals of good dressing to me are APPROPRIATENESS, BEAUTY and CHARACTER, which can all be symbolized by adapting the fashions to one's self and not one's self to the whim of fashion.

A frock must be appropriate first of all. The most beautiful gown in the world worn at the wrong time would look ridiculous, and there can be no real beauty without the sense of the fitness of things.

As a sex we have progressed tremendously since we adopted short skirts for the street.

Now, when we see a woman trailing a long skirt through the dust our sense of beauty and fitness is rudely shocked.

Whether on the stage or in actual life the girl who is earning her daily bread, and nowadays she is becoming the heroine of many a successful play, must dress in suitable frocks.

They must be pretty as well, but they must be as well adapted to her occupation as the automobile togs in which later on she drives off as the wife of the millionaire.

I needn't dwell on the subject of beauty, for I take it for granted that any woman reading these words wants to look as well as she can or she would skip to some other part of the paper.

Character of Dress Necessary

Now for the character of the dress. This is absolutely necessary on the stage because the actress has to look right to audience at once with the sort of person she is supposed to be, and clothes help to do this. If she is a light, frivolous little butterfly-lady she will wear clothes that match her part, lovely ruffly things of filmy, floating materials, all cut up in shortlines.

If she is playing the part of a noble, dignified character her frocks will show the long unbroken lines which in all times have been accepted by artists as symbolizing nobility.

Such a character will wear simple clothes no matter what the period of the play or what the fashions are. Simple clothes don't necessarily mean cheap ones.

On the contrary—the greatest dressmakers in the world strive for simplicity of effect, but no one ever said their bills were low! It is the wonderful simplicity of line which is beautiful and impressive, and so hard for the unskilled dressmaker to copy. The ordinary dressmaker seems to go by this rule. When in doubt, use more trimming!

That is why so many charming women go about bedecked like Christmas trees with overgrown bustle and dangling from every inch of material.

Naturally one does not see that they are really very pretty women, for one is so engrossed in the inspection of the marvelous confections which enfold them.

I remember once a celebrated playwright was presented to me at a reception. I had looked forward to meeting her and talking to her, and later found her a most fascinating and interesting woman, but with a soul for above clothes, which she left entirely to her maid to make for her.

We had no chance to talk that night and the next day when I was asked what light she looked like all I could say was: Mme had twenty-seven bows on her dress. They were so overpowering I hadn't a chance to see her at all. Whether you are a great beauty or just a little one, don't let over-elaborate fashions extinguish your power to enjoy and to help create an ideal home.

A development of humanitarian qualities and sympathy will settle many servant problems.

The ideal home must be a home to the domestics as well as to employers.

From such a home may a woman extend her arms of usefulness to those who are below her and above her, and even into the Invisible Realms of the Beyond, whose borders lie close to the boundaries of the Ideal Home.

Miss Mannering gowned to demonst rate the beauty of long, graceful lines in a dress.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON hadn't shaved for two days; he was ugly and worn with work and dejection, and if his collar and cuffs were not clean he didn't know it.

His brow nothing, except that he felt rested without his coat, vest and shoes and with his feet higher than his head. If he didn't resemble a noble knight, if there was nothing about his appearance to inspire admiration, he was blissfully ignorant.

Daysey Mayme looked at him coldly and critically. She was not ignorant, by any means, and felt that the time had come for explaining why an object like that had come into the family.

She had delayed her apology to her daughter too long. She must make it now! It was the just dues of the Family Princess.

"I was very young then," she said, and she had difficulty in being heard above her husband's snore. "Only a mere child, and your father had fascinating manners."

Daysey Mayme looked very dubious.

"He really had," said her mother, "and always brought me roses."

Daysey Mayme began to grow pale around the mouth. Her father, young and fascinating and carrying roses! It was beyond belief.

"I had refused three dukes and a millionaire," said Mrs. Appleton: "I was young and believed in LOVE."

She saw a look of scorn in the eyes of the modern maid she had mothered.

"But," she continued, hastily, "I wouldn't have married him for anything so trivial as that. Let me tell you all about it, and then forgive me if you can.

"You have always heard it was an elopement," she said. "It wasn't. It was an ABDUCTION.

"One night I was standing at the gate alone when that man stole up behind me, threw a shawl over my head, carried me to a carriage, and before I could scream for help I was standing with him in front of a preacher, and the deed was done."

Here she cried; but she was glad she had explained everything to her daughter.

The Family Princess looked at the man, who sat there snoring, with his head sliding from side to side like that of a drunken man.

She understood at last why Mother had married a common, ordinary-looking man like Father.

And this is the explanation given many girls who are Family Princesses.

The Ideal Home

It Depends on the Woman. The Most Perfect Type of Man Could Not Make an Ideal Home if the Woman Who Shared His Residence Were a Virago, Dissolute or Immoral.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

CHARACTER building is the first important duty in life.

Next comes home building.

And how rarely do we find the woman who made this second object one of serious thought or effort.

Ask one hundred young girls from eighteen to twenty-five to describe an ideal home, and how difficult they would find the task.

Because the ideal has not been formed in their minds.

One has been thinking of a career as an artist; another wants to write; another longs to go abroad and study for the stage.

One has social ambitions, but a large fortune and a rich husband comprise her ideals of happiness. It would be remarkable if one girl in the entire hundred should be able to promptly define her ideal of a perfect home, a home where husband and children might find earth's best happiness, and in the wife and mother ask no larger or greater field of usefulness.

It is the woman who makes or mars the home. The most perfect type of man could not make an ideal home if the woman who shared his residence were a virago, dissolute or immoral.

Must Be the Woman.

Yet many instances can be found where the ideal and tactful woman has made her home a centre of delight and inspiration and comfort to children and friends, despite the fact that her partner in life lacked all the virtues which she believed he possessed on the day he led her to the altar.

This is not surprising, when we consider that thoughts are living things, and that a strong, well-poised, healthful mind, continually sending out hopeful, loving, kind and patient thoughts for sixteen hours of the waking period of the day, can do much to counteract the disagreeable or unwholesome thoughts which the man may send forth for less than half that time.

Therefore the real homemaker must be the woman.

When she is aided by the man, then, indeed, heaven comes very near, and if the man fails to do his part she has, at least, the pride and satisfaction of knowing she gave him his chance of happiness, and she knows, too, that she made peace and pleasure possible for her children and her friends, despite his handicap.

An appreciation of a beautiful and attractive home is the first cornerstone to be laid. Then must come ideals of comfort and convenience; then a study of restful and becoming colors, and an expression of individual taste.

Whatever part economy plays in a home, it must never cripple the daintiness of table or bed, in order to make a display in showy ornamentation or elaborate menus.

The very best manners, the sunniest moods, the whitest linen and the sweet perfumes must wait for the home circle rather than for the sometimes guest.

Splendors Not Needed.

Whoever enters that home must feel the good will, the unselfishness, the simple hospitality and the spirit of gratitude which its inmates have in their hearts.

If these are the thoughts sent out by the dominating spirit of the home, they will be felt by all who enter the door.

If the wife and mother appreciates her home enough to make it her shrine, be sure the children will join with her in the sentiment of worship, and unless the husband is indeed hopeless, he will come into an understanding of all the wealth which is his in having such a home, and join in the chorus.

Mahogany and rosewood and marble and grouze are not needed to complete the ideal home.

There are million-dollar palaces scattered all over America, which are not only unideal, but they do not even deserve the name of homes.

There was an ideal home, where continual economy stood guard over each small purchase, and where a comfortable semi-invalid husband and father was not able to dim the sunshine of good nature and hopefulness and merriment which filled the small domain with hope and happiness from year end to year end.

Home to Servants, Too.

The ideal home must be built upon the sure foundations of cheerfulness, a sense of humor, unselfishness, the idealizing of the commonplace—and then must come a training of the mind in the laws of beauty and appropriateness and usefulness. The chemical values of food, cooking in a fine art, architecture, interior decorations, embroidery, needlework, music, all these things are good for a woman to study who wants to develop in herself the

OUR GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA TO RESTORE COLOR TO GRAY AND FADED HAIR

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair, long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, color and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, color and beauty, and makes it grow.

The Keeper's Error

LORD DECIES told a good story about an American millionaire.

"His first name is the sounding one of Augustus," Lord Decies said. "You know how he travels—with what a retinue of valets and chauffeurs and secretaries. Well, it was with even a grander retinue than usual that he arrived, at the opening of the shooting season, at a certain English country house. He arrived, I understand, with seven motor cars.

"Of course he was treated on all sides with the profoundest deference. But the head keeper called him by his first name! Actually!

"The head keeper didn't seem lacking in respect; gave him a splendid place, saw that he got lots of birds and so on; but, all the time, it was 'Augustus this' and 'Augustus that.' 'Is your gun all right, Augustus?' 'A very good shot, Augustus.' 'Augustus, is your stool comfortable?'

"The millionaire flushed darkly and glared at the old head keeper the first time he was called Augustus. But he said nothing. And afterward he got used to it. But his host happened to appear, and, hearing the keeper say to the haughty millionaire, 'Well winged, well winged, Augustus,' he took the old chap aside and whispered:

"'Why, keeper, I don't know what to make of you! Are you drunk, man? The idea of your calling Mr. Van Golden by his first name like that!'

"'His first name, sir? And the old keeper flushed under his tan.

"'Yes! Augustus, indeed! What do you mean by it?'

"The keeper looked terribly distressed.

"'Oh, sir,' he stammered, 'I hope you'll excuse me, sir. I thought "Augustus" was a title—a very high title like "My lord Duke" or "Your serene highness, sir."'

Good Advice

FATHER BERNARD VAUGHAN gave some advice to young men in a humorous address on the Mississippi.

"Popularity, popularity among the ladies, is a great help to any young man," said Father Vaughan, "and there is nothing like unexpectedly to make a young man popular.

"I heard a lady praising a young man the other evening.

"'He is so generous,' she said. 'He takes me out and I get a dinner nearly every week. We dote on him.'

"They she smiled and added:

"'In fact, we table d'hote on him.'"

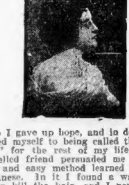
HOW I KILLED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Even After Beauty Doctors, Electricity, Powders, Paste and Liquid Depilatories Failed.

(From a Correspondent.)

"Killed" seems a strong word to use, but that is just what I wanted to do to the hair that disfigured my face and arms; I wanted to kill it root and all, so that it would never live again. It spoiled my looks, made me seem old and masculine, and hence interfered with both social and business success.

I tried the ordinary dissolvents and depilatories, but found them worthless—even dangerous. From a so-called specialist I secured electrical treatment. It was painful and expensive, but I would have stood the suffering and cost had I not found that the needle (electrolysis) often leaves scars that are even worse than the disfiguring hair itself.



So I gave up hope, and in despair resigned myself to being called the "hairy lady" for the rest of my life, until a travelled friend persuaded me to try a new and easy method learned from the Japanese. It found that I had to gradually kill the hair, and I permanently removed the superfluous growth, at the same time improving my complexion.

Having myself experienced so many previous disappointments, I have decided to offer my discovery to others, and for the benefit of my sex I will gladly explain to sufferers the method which cured me. It is nothing like the powder, paste and liquid preparations that simply burn off the exposed hair and never kill the skin. It is a discovery only recently introduced into this country, and so simple that any woman can use it in the privacy of her own room, and in only a few minutes' time.

Many friends have said to me: "It seems too good to be true," but the test proved it true both for myself and others as well. If you will write Mme. Annette, 1215 Sutter street, San Francisco, which will be sent in plain, sealed envelope, you will receive the same information, and you will tell you fully and freely about this wonderful discovery so that you can be free from superfluous hair. Mme. Annette's address is Parlors 1215 Sutter st., 125 East 24th St., New York City.

SPECIAL ENDORSEMENT: As the method above referred to has been endorsed by doctors, true specialists and many other publishers, we advise all readers thus afflicted to take advantage of Mme. Osgood's offer and write her at once at above address.

I'LL HELP YOU SAVE GAL! NOW CLAUDE E CLAIRE CARAMBA WE ARE TOO LATE THE SHIP HAS LEAVE
HA, HA, THERE FOOLED
THE PIER IS SWINGING ALONG WITH THE LINER. WE'LL GET ON BOARD AND RESCUE MY ROSAMOND YET. HURRY UP DON FRIJOLE
I CAN'T FIND THAT WOMAN'S POCKET BOOK UNDER THIS PIER. WHAT? THEY'RE MOVING. THEY'VE STARTED. THE SHIP AND FORGOT ME
CURSES! THE PIER IS MOVING AND THAT BUNK HERO CLAUDE IS ON. CURSES ON THE LUCK CURSES!
DESMOND, YOU HOUND, YOUR DOOM IS SEALED
THE LUCK
A CURSE! THAT ARE GOING TO HAND ME OVER TO THE AUTHORITIES AT GIBRALTAR CURSES!

Don Frijole, the dreaded Spanish bandit, has the unfortunate Rosamond in his power, and Desmond is quick to realize his chance of getting possession of the girl. Producing his check book he quickly makes one out in favor of the brigand. Claude, who has hoped to raise a loan, comes into the bank and encounters the brigand. Their mutual hatred of Desmond gives them a bond of interest and they resolve to pursue the villain.

Here is a fine position for a trusting husband. Frijole attempts to cash the check Desmond has given him and is promptly told by the bank official that the paper is worthless. Desmond has put one over on a fellow brigand. Claude, who has hoped to raise a loan, comes into the bank and encounters the brigand. Their mutual hatred of Desmond gives them a bond of interest and they resolve to pursue the villain.

Making a desperate effort to catch the steamer for Gibraltar, Frijole and Claude dash madly down the pier from which the vessel is sailing. But alas! the ship has just cast off and is slowly making her way out into the harbor. Too late! and the villain Desmond is aboard with Rosamond, laughing at the futile attempts of his pursuers to catch the ship. Villainy has once more triumphed over virtue.

To the intense surprise of Claude and his side-partner, Don Frijole, the pier suddenly begins to move through the water. They cannot understand the cause for this, but since the ship does not get any farther away from them, the pair are greatly pleased, and are content to take what happens as a gift of fate. Aboard the ship there is equal surprise, for it is not often that even a flighty pier takes it into its head to sail after a departing vessel.

Below the water we see the explanation of the pier's strange action. A diver has been sent down to search for a pocket-book which some woman passenger thought she had dropped overboard. And with the diver it was a case of out of sight, out of mind. The crew forgets him and when the steamer moves out it pulls the flimsy pier along with it. Thus a seeming miracle is very simply explained.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "but I haven't the strength of Gibraltar." The villain is a prisoner in the hands of Claude, and when the ship reaches Gibraltar he will be turned over to the military officials, who may be expected to give him a short shrift. It is a happy moment for the lovers when the great rock appears above the horizon. What happens at Gibraltar will be shown tomorrow.

A Mother's Jealousy

By WINIFRED BLACK.

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

I am a commercial traveler and my age is twenty-four. My business takes me away from home a great part of the time. On June 3, 1910, I married. Previous to that I had made a home for my mother, who brought me up after my father had deserted us.

Now, I want you to appreciate the fact that I realize what my mother has gone through for me, and I intend to make her as happy and content as lies in my power, financially and otherwise.

My wife wants a home for herself, which, of course, is quite natural. My mother takes the wrong view of the subject by saying I find her in the way and want to get rid of her.

I even proposed to take my wife away and leave mother the home and send her money to live on, but she idolizes me and can not bear to have me separated from her. The result is that a feeling has grown up between the two women folk that puts me in a three-cornered game.

Something must be done. If I leave home my wife, it will just about kill mother, as she is getting along in years and her health is not the best. If I do not, my wife is going to leave without me. Mother objects me to leave my wife, which I certainly do not want to do, for I love my wife dearly.

Yours, in need of some advice.

F. H. R.

WELL, my friend, you certainly are in trouble, and deep trouble at that.

How shall you get out of it? You are not going to get out of it as long as those two women live and hate each other for loving you.

What can you do? Your simple, honest, decent, even-handed duty. That's all, and then make the best of it.

Give the woman you have married what she has the right to ask, what every honest woman and good wife has a right to wish for—a home of her own. Tell your mother you are going to do that, and ask her to be decent about it. Tell her you are going to do it any way, and you would like to have her make up her mind to it, and make up her mind now.

Of course, you will provide for her according to your means, but keep your mother out of your wife's home and keep your wife out of your mother's house. Move to a different town if you can, a different country if you must.

Peace at any price, justice though it kills the one who cries out upon it. It is your duty not only to your wife and to yourself to take this stand, but it is your duty to your mother.

She was a good friend to you, the best you ever had. Well, be a good friend to her now. Take the best care of her as long as she lives, but that is not enough. She is in danger now, in danger of a cruel hate which is creeping into her heart and threatening her very reason. You must help her stamp it out, and there's only one way to do that, move, and move now.

Your mother won't die if you leave her. You'll die if you stay with her.

Every time you are five minutes late to dinner she'll conjure something against "her," and every time you want to sit and talk into the 'fits in peace she'll make a scene about "that woman."

There's no jealousy so dreadful as the jealousy of a mother for her son.

Many women go crazy from just this one think alone. Don't let your mother go crazy. Keep her sane by being sane yourself, sane, just, reasonable, kind.

That's the way to help your wife, to help yourself and to help your mother. Try it.

The Prince and the Plutocrat; or, The Grand Babylon Hotel
Arnold Bennett's Great Mystery Story

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By Arnold Bennett

Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Company

IT was a small yacht, but her practiced eye at once told her that it belonged to the highest aristocracy of pleasure craft.

As she reclined in the deck chair it did not occur to her at the moment to speculate as to the identity of the person who had laid her therein; she examined all visible details of the vessel. The deck was as white and smooth as her own hand, and the seams ran along its length like blue veins.

All the brass work, from the band round the slender funnel to the concave surface of the binnacle, shone like gold. Two tapered masts stretched upward at a rakish angle, and the rigging seemed like spun silk. No sails were set; the yacht was under steam and doing about seven or eight knots.

She judged it was a boat of a hundred tons or so, probably Clyde built, and not more than two or three years old.

A Prisoner on the Yacht

No one was to be seen on deck except the man at the wheel. This man wore a blue jersey, but there was neither name nor initials on the jersey; nor was there a name on the white lifebuoys lashed to the main rigging, nor on the polished disc over which hung high on the starboard lavits.

She called to the man and called again, in a feeble voice, but he took no notice of her, and continued his quiet vigil, though nothing else existed in the universe save the yacht, the sea, the sun and himself.

Then her eyes swept the outline of the land from which they were hastening, and she could just distinguish a lighthouse and a great white irregular dome which she recognized as the Kursaal at Ostend, that gorgeous rival of the gaming palace at Monte Carlo.

So she was leaving Ostend! On the whole, she felt glad to be leaving Ostend. The rays of the sun fell on her correspondingly, like a restorative. All around the water was changing from wonderful grays and dark blues to still more wonderful pinks and translucent amarthly greens. The magic kaleidoscope of dawn was going forward in its accustomed way, regardless of the vicissitudes of mortals.

Sails in Distance

Here and there in the distance she described a sail—the brown sail of some Ostend fishing boat returning home after a night's trawling. Then the beat of paddles caught her ear, and a steamer hundered past, wallowing clumsily among the waves like a tortoise.

It was the Swallow, from London. She could see some of its passengers leaning curiously over the aft rail.

A girl in a mackintosh signaled to her, and mechanically Nella answered the salute with her arm. The offices on the bridge of the Swallow hailed the yacht, but the man at the wheel offered no reply.

In another minute the Swallow was nothing but a blot in the distance.

Nella tried to sit up straight in the deck chair, but she found herself unable to do so. Throwing off the rug which covered her, she discovered that she had been tied to the chair by means of a piece of broad webbing.

Instantly she was alert, awake, angry. She knew now that her perils were not over; she felt that possibly they had scarcely yet begun.

Her lazy contentment, her dreamy sense of peace and repose, vanished utterly, and she steeled herself to meet the dangers of a grave and difficult situation.

Just at that moment a man came up from below.

He was a middle-aged man, clad in irreproachable blue, with a peaked yachting cap. He raised the cap politely.

"Good Morning," He Said

"Good morning," he said. "Beautiful sunrise, isn't it?"

The clever and calculated insolence of his tone cut her like a lash as she lay bound in the chair. Like all people who have lived easy and joyous lives in those fair regions where good smooths every crease and laws keep a tight hand on disorder, she found it hard to realize that there were other regions where gold was useless and law without power.

Twenty-four hours ago she would have declared it impossible that such an experience as she had suffered could happen to any one; she would have talked airily about civilization and the Nineteenth Century and progress and the police.

But her experience was teaching her that human nature remains always the same, and that beneath the thin crust of security on which we good citizens exist the dark and secret passions of crime subsist time to move, just as they did in the days when thieves preyed upon the highways of the very heart of London.

Her experience was in a fair way to teach her this lesson better than she could have learned it even in the bureau of the detective police of Paris, London and New Orleans.

"Good morning," the man repeated, and she glanced at him with a sullen, angry glare.

"You!" she exclaimed. "You, Mr. Thomas Jackson, if that is your name! Loose me from this chair and I will talk to you!"

Her Eye Flashed

Her eye flashed as she spoke, and the contempt in them added mightily to her beauty.

Thomas Jackson, otherwise Jules, erstwhile head waiter at the Grand Babylon, considered himself a connoisseur in female loveliness, and the vision of Nella Rackstraw aroused him like an exquisite blow.

"With pleasure," he replied, "I had forgotten I had secured you to the chair," and with a quick movement he unfastened the bond.

Nella stood up, quivering with a fury of annoyance and scorn.

"Now, she said, fronting him, "what is the meaning of this?"

"You fainted," he replied imperturbably. "Perhaps you don't remember?"

The man twirled his long moustache with a characteristic gesture. Nella was obliged to acknowledge, in spite of herself, that the fellow had distinction, an air of breeding.

Jules in Command

No one would have guessed that for twenty years he had been a hotel waiter. His long, lithe figure and easy careless carriage seemed to be the figure and carriage of an aristocrat, and his voice was quiet, restrained, authoritative.

That has nothing to do with my being carried off in this yacht of yours."

"It is not my yacht," he said, "but this is a minor detail. As to the more important matter, forgive me if I remind you that only a few hours ago you were threatening a lady to my house with a revolver."

"Then it was your house?"

"Why not? May I not possess a house?" He smiled.

LAW HOLDS UP THIS ROMANCE

PITTSFIELD, Feb. 7.—After the new five-day marriage law had aggravated them to the legal limit, Miss Morra Potter and Robert Reece seemed to-day their best bet to marry following the proposal by Miss Potter in a Leap Year romance. The wedding will take place at 7 o'clock this evening at the Morningside Baptist parsonage, Rev. Harry J. Leach will perform the ceremony.

January 31 Miss Potter and Mr. Reece filed marriage intentions with City Clerk Norman C. Hull. They expected to get the license yesterday, allowing for the five days now required between intentions and marriage.

But recently Attorney-General Swift ruled that the day of filing intentions does not count, nor does Sunday either. So City Clerk Hull, taking no chances, decided that he could not issue the license till to-day. At 10:45 the couple appeared at City Hall and secured the coveted document, witnessing affidavits in behalf of the Attorney-General and his judicial red-tape.

The couple has been given many prizes because Miss Potter did the proposing. They have been guests at theatre box parties, have been feted and entertained and will receive presents to the value of $600. Railroad tickets to New York and return are among them.

It is announced that, within a few days after this wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Reece will give a reception to friends.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS DOWN IN NOON HOUR

STATE STREET, Feb. 7.—Afternoon stock prices were on the wane after noon in both New York and Boston. United Shoe Machinery, the early feature, declined until its net loss from yesterday's closing was 7 points.

Prices for other stocks in this market were: Calumet & Arizona at 58¾, off ½; Copper Range at 50, off ¼; Greene Cananea at 8¼, up ⅛; Giroux at 4⅝, off ⅛; Mayflower at 2½, up ⅛; Mohawk at 51, off ½; North Butte at 25⅛, off ⅛; Old Colony at 6, off ⅛; Superior at 25, up ⅛; Inspiration at 18, off ⅛; Mason Valley at 11¼, off ⅛; Hay Consolidated at 17⅛, up ⅛.

Lake Copper at 18 off⅛; United Fruit at 130, off ⅛.

Leaders in the New York market were mostly off. Reading selling at 157⅛, off ⅝; New York Central 110⅜, off ⅝; Steel 60¾, off ⅝; Union Pacific 163, off ⅜; Southern Pacific 107, off ⅛; Southern Railway preferred 71¼, up ¼; and 4 per cent. dividend rumor; Amalgamated 69⅝, off ⅜.

N. Y. Shorts Cover in Two Stocks.

Covering by shorts was the motive attributed to buying which caused Union Pacific to advance ¾ and Reading to more than ¾ in the last hour in the New York stock market. Outside of these two stocks the tone was heavy, prices weak and prices were irregular. Fractional losses were registered by Pan-American, Missouri, Kansas & Texas and Southern Pacific.

United States Steel common, after moving up ¼, yielded to a shade under Thursday's closing quotation. Other issues of its list showed advance or a fraction of a point decline. Amalgamated Copper was making fractional gains.

Coalers were strong at the opening of its initial advance of ¾ and a number of other stocks recorded slightly after making fractional gains. There was a fair sized irregularity in Lehigh Valley, the opening ¾, Lehigh Valley was up ¼.

The cash wheat market at London were narrow, but firm, on professional buying.

The $2,000,000 in gold bars engaged for to-morrow makes a total of $6,000,000 bound for Paris under the present movement. In addition $2,500,000 has been shipped to South America so far in 1912. The bars are being forwarded as a commodity, and it is believed that no effort is allowed the shipper while the metal is in transit. The exchange rate is not as high as when exportation began, and the demand is evidently very important.

Cotton Reaches a New High Level.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—A new high level for the present movement was established at the opening of the cotton market to-day, when prices advanced from 13 to 25 points. The tone was in consequence of a sudden sharp rise which set in late yesterday. Speculative shorts were the chief buyers on the call and later the shorts being crowded a good position by the bears, Liverpool and Southern spot interests also bought freely. Future advices from Liverpool.

The Washington report of the tariff board on the cotton schedule is expected within a fortnight.

Cotton opening: March 9.78, May 9.92, July 10.00, August 10.14, October 10.15, December 10.12. Closing: March 9.93, May 10.12, July 10.00, August 10.12, October 10.13, December 10.11. Cotton: May 9.93, up 12; July 10.00, up 12; October 10.13, up 11; December 10.11, up 11. Spot cotton good demand; prices steady. Middlings 5.75, up 6 points. Sales estimated 15,000 bales; receipts 11,000, including 10,000 American. Futures opened firm, with prices 13 points up, steady, 8 to 8½ up from previous close; March 9.78, May 9.92, July 10.00, August 10.14, October 10.15, December 10.12.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Jersey Central has been making new high records for months past on very limited transactions. The moment any body wants any of its stock, the shares act like balloons. In August last it sold for 240. Yesterday a unit sold ten shares when 341 was asked—some ascension in six months—and he got them at 357½. The sale of 100 shares was at 375, a jump of 35 points in one Wall street session. As the stock pays not 12 per cent. in dividends it is not any commentator on an investment and the New York Sun suggests "If Jersey Central is not continuplating some extra distribution, whether in segregation of real properties, declaration of extra dividends or otherwise, the tape is a liar. Of the $77,436,800 Jersey Central stock outstanding, $14,304,000 is owned by Reading, which is understood to carry it on its books at par. At yesterday's high price the stock has a market value of $54,000,000, and if Jersey Central cuts a melon, Reading will be in a position to do nothing extra for its stockholders."

The American smelting & Refining Company yesterday offered in Europe electrolytic copper at a price whose New York equivalent is 12.30 a pound. Other American producers, but April prices for delivery abroad, but there was nothing doing to speak of. The Red Dog mine, the benefit of consumers this side of the ocean.

The work of the Pure Food commission has given the public more confidence in the wholesomeness of canned goods. Returns to the Secretary of the American Can Company for latter trade more than last year, because the demand for canned goods increased. The earnings of the company for 1911 increased $1,950,872. The prospects are that for 1912 will be even better. In the two banking days, as about all old stocks have been disposed of and there is only left the unissued new securities will be better the coming summer. A dividend of irrepressible damage last year.

The Erie Railroad has been reported in the United States District Court in New York on the matter of obtaining the right to prevent the road from keeping train crews at work on or duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours. There are three charges in the complaint against the Erie. The first of the five which may be taken is $25,000. It is understood that several representatives of organized labor are expected to be in the Chamber of Commerce Committee to investigate the charges as recent agents.

DENIES LYING IN LORIMER CASE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Charles McGowan, the Canadian witness in the Lorimer case, whom the Burns detective agency attempted to "rope" and prove he had committed perjury, returned to the witness stand before the investigating committee to-day, and all the material statements made against him by the Burns operatives.

McGowan said emphatically he never had told Detective Bailey or any one else that he had committed perjury, or that he had endeavored to "hold up" the Hines people for $5,000.

Judge Haney asked: "Did you ever tell Bailey or anybody else that you had perjured yourself in this investigation in Washington?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever tell Bailey or anybody else that everything Burgess had testified to was true?"

"I did not."

"Did you ever tell Bailey or Stewart that you had perjured yourself unjustly in the interests of the Hines people?"

"No, sir."

MUST NEWSPOP GOT

The writer of a lively story in the Sunday AMERICAN declares that city is doomed as a Summer resort because the Navy Department has designs upon the place. Every one will make them laugh up in Portsmouth, where everybody believes that the plan to abandon the smaller navy yards is due to the partiality of the navy people for "society." An interesting story, nevertheless, to be found only in the Sunday AMERICAN.

AUNT CLAIMS BODY OF MISS ARENBERG

The body of Jennie Arenberg, the waitress and goddess of light opera, found at No. 21 Yarmouth street because she discovered the man with whom she had been fascinated was married, was taken from the City Hospital morgue to-day by her aunt, Mrs. Lottie Atwood of Crescent avenue, Chelsea and the interment will probably be at Beth Israel Cross, N. S., where her parents live. The letter which the dead woman left, the contents of which have been published in the Sunday AMERICAN, was given to the aunt when she claimed the body and effects.

CONVERSE SOLE $180,000 FROM BANK

WINDSOR LOCKS, Ct., Feb. 7.—The Windsor Locks Savings Bank, owing to the speculations of its former treasurer, Edward W. Converse, is hopelessly insolvent, according to a statement of Savings Bank Commissioner Fred P. Holt to-day. What Converse did with the money he took is a mystery. His mode of life was always simple and well within his salary, while the losses on even speculation on time stock exchange are hinted at. Converse misused no more than $180,000, of which $100,000 have been expected, and an investigation has been started to find out how he spent the money. His speculations are said to total $180,000.

STATE PRISONER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Vasil Karos, serving seven years in the Charlestown State prison, is being closely watched by guards, following an attempt to strangle himself in his cell with his necktie. A guard heard a choking sound from the cell. He found Karos pulling desperately on his necktie, which was fastened with a slipknot around his neck. He had choked himself just enough to make him gasp loudly, thus attracting the attention of the guard and defeating his suicidal plan. The guard snatched the necktie from him and the man is well again.

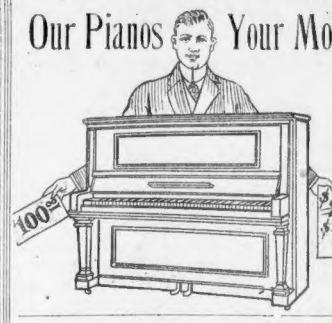
GIVING vs. SAVING

Our Pianos Your Money



If we advertised to give customers $100 with each purchase of a piano, our salesrooms wouldn't hold the crowds. You'd try to be the first one here. We cannot do this, but we do promise to save you $100 on any piano in our stock, and we have all the best makes. Does it not amount to the same thing? Think it over. Just take the forenoon and go around other piano salesrooms and then come our here and see for yourself that what we say is absolutely true. And you can make terms to suit your pocketbook. Could you ask more? Make up your mind to do it at once. Don't put it off. You may miss just the piano you wanted.

Charles Dickens Born 100 Years Ago Today

One of the World's Great, Good and Useful Men—He Has Exercised a Blessed and Ennobling Influence Upon Millions of Human Beings

One hundred years ago, on the seventh of February, 1812, the year of the war between England and America, there was born a baby named Charles Dickens. The birth of that child was more important and his influence on human beings was infinitely greater than the war of 1812, or many wars.

It is needless to speak of Dickens to those that read the English language. He is a friend and has been one of the strongest influences in millions of lives.

Brandies says that more books have been written about Hamlet, the imaginary Dane, than about all the real men that ever lived in Denmark.

There is life in Dickens' characters that never lived, and there have been more laughter and more tears and more thought about them, perhaps, than about any hundred or thousand real men that ever lived in English history.

Pickwick and his friends and the immortal Samuel are real.

Tiny Tim, the spirit of Happiness, Patience and Love, is real.

The Little Dressmaker, the Raven that pulled corks in "Barnaby Rudge," the Marchioness, Dick Swiveller, the Frightened Little Boy in "David Copperfield," Oliver Twist, Fagin, the Cheeryble Brothers, Marley, who was dead as a door nail, and Scrooge—and all the line of heroes and heroines—how wonderful and how real they are.

How fruitful was the brain of Charles Dickens in which they were born.

How justly the world honors his memory.

Dickens was a preacher of goodness, kindness and justice—there was not a stain upon any line of his writings. Not a word that could fail to make better the child that might read, not a suggestion of unworthy thought could be found in the many pages that he gave to the world.

Earnestness, dignity, beauty, hatred of cruelty and meanness and absolute purity of thought were the characteristics of all the work that Dickens did. His work and his success rebuke the inferior minds that in our day seek to attract attention by unworthy methods.

Everything that is good in human nature Dickens saw and emphasized and presented in all of its beauty. He believed in human nature and in the power of man's goodness to fight and overcome wrong. And history justifies his belief.

He attacked the prison of debtors, and it is gone, with many other ills that disgraced the day in which he lived.

He has made hypocrisy hideous in the person of Uriah Heep and brutality repulsive in Bill Sikes. The name of Pecksniff and Micawber are real, rich words added to the English language, Dickens words, that for millions of human beings have an absolute and distinct meaning.

Dickens is a friend and an inspiration, a rebuke to what is evil and a brilliant painter of the good in human beings. If there is anything of his that you have not read, read it and see to it that your children read him and know him, and honor his memory.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THANKS FOR PRAISE OF BLUEJACKETS

Editor AMERICAN:

I read with deep pleasure in your paper the opinion about Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors, given by "A New England Girl" from Hampton, New Hampshire, and "An Army Girl" from Fort Banks, Boston harbor. I would like to meet those ladies and give them a hearty handshake, thanking them for their true and sincere ideas.

I, too, have studied the opinions of civilians about the man in uniform and have made many sad discoveries. People wrong us, and the good ones have to suffer with the bad ones. The majority of the soldiers and sailors are true-hearted gentlemen, and carry the same honor in their heart as any civilian, and, what is more, their honor rests on a true basis.

We are at all times ready to lay our lives down for our country and for our loved ones; therefore, why should people have a right to "down" us. When, now and then, we read an article similar to that by the "New England Girl" and the "Army Girl," believe me, we all get together, giving three cheers for such true and sensible girls.

A BOY IN BLUE.

A BROADWAY FOR BOSTON

Editor AMERICAN:

I believe it to be the duty of every citizen to make at all times suggestions for the benefit of our city.

Therefore, I ask why should not Boston have a Broadway that in time might compare favorably with those of other great cities.

We should seize the opportunity presented by the removal of the old Court House. Standing as it did for many years, it was an eyesore in the very heart of Boston, with its cold, gloomy walls, as a monument of things that have passed away. Would it not be a pity to see an annex to our City Hall built where a wide street should be?

Our present City Hall is antiquated, and to patch on an annex would be a grave mistake at this time, and block for years one of the greatest of improvements. A new City Hall should be built on Beacon Hill, or beyond Boston Common, south.

Here, in the very heart of the city, the land from the north side of Court street to the south side of School street would not have to be paid for, and right here is the very place where the mighty start should commence for a Broadway for Boston.

The start having been made, the rest would follow. Buildings of modern type right in the heart of the city would at once spring up, bringing millions of taxable property into use and relieving the ever increasing stream of travel on Tremont and Washington streets. Even at this time, if not possible to extend this Broadway from Hanover to Boylston streets, the start can be made and year by year extend portions of the street.

Eventually this Broadway would be extended beyond Boylston street for many miles, or at least to Dudley street, and Boston could have a Broadway in years to come that would rank as one of the grandest avenues in the country.

FRIEND TO THE BLUE JACKETS

Editor AMERICAN:

I would like to shake hands with the girl who so loyally spoke in the favor of our brave boys in blue. I, too, am a friend of the sailors, as I have found many more good traits in them than in the fellows of the outside world.

Whenever I hear people putting them all in the bad class, I just let them know that the jackies have someone who is willing to acknowledge their good principles. It is a great mistake for the people of Boston to think that every sailor is bad. Why not think of the old true saying, "There is good and bad everywhere."

I have a brother and two very dear friends in the navy and I know if there are three gentlemen in our navy there are surely a great many more, if people will only use their common sense.

One Lesson of the Lawrence Strike

The Way to Head Off Socialism Is to Put an End to the Conditions That Breed Socialism

In Germany the Socialists have become the most important party.

In France, they hold the balance of power and count among their number the ablest statesmen. It was a Socialist prime minister who guided France through the recent crisis of the great railway strike.

In Italy the Socialists seem on the verge of control.

In England reforms have been adopted which, in this country, are considered advanced Socialism.

In Portugal they have destroyed a monarchy and set up a republic.

In China they are destroying a monarchy and setting up a republic.

In America, city after city has passed into the hands of the Socialists. There is a Socialist Congressman. There are men and women of wealth and culture who, with increasing numbers, are publicly avowing their fealty to the Socialistic doctrines.

Thousands beyond our knowledge, among the most intelligent of our citizens, have secretly espoused the cause, waiting cautiously for its further advance before joining the ranks of those publicly committed to it.

So resistlessly forward rolls the world-wide radical movement, neither kings nor emperors nor politicians nor plutocrats have given it a serious check.

Among us it grows with every new trust; with every new fact learned of an old trust; with every special privilege which gives to those who have and takes away from those who have not.

Those who most strongly disbelieve in Socialism greatly help its advancement by failing to correct the abuses from which it is a reaction. Those who hate it, help it onward most of all, because they are the bad actors in life's drama, who will not play according to the rules of the game; exploiters who are striving successfully to reap what other men have sown, to luxuriate in the sweat of the other man's brow.

It is not by the convincing power of its own doctrines that Socialism is growing beyond control. It is growing by the continuance of manifest and indefensible wrongs whose resistance to correction destroys in so many good men all hope that they will ever be corrected under the present organization of society.

It is growing also by the folly of those who resist all attempts to correct these wrongs, calling the attempted reforms Socialism, and the would-be reformers, Socialists or Anarchists.

So it is at Lawrence today. There grown men, heads of families, are working for less than eight dollars a week in a tariff-protected industry when unprotected, unskilled labor, like digging weeds on a farm, digging ditches on a highway, laying railroad ties, carrying the hod or laying bricks in mortar, earns a much higher wage.

Against such indefensible conditions in America, such a degradation of American standards of living, its victims have made a vigorous protest. Now the short-sighted beneficiaries of the things which are wrong in our social organization denounce this protest as an illegitimate, socialistic and anarchistic propaganda. This false charge is made to prejudice naturally conservative men, and, worst of all, it usually succeeds in perverting the judgment of enough of our citizens to prevent the correction of these abuses.

By the cry of Socialism the gaze of the well-intentioned but susceptible conservatives is thus turned away from a clear view of wrongs which look as black as the "night's Plutonian shore" to those who gaze squarely at them.

So the wrong goes unrighted because society is divided concerning it, and the Socialists gain the credit from their most extreme opponents of being the only hopeful champions of the right who are courageously attacking conditions which all our citizens know are bad and growing worse.

Isn't it time that those who dread the encroachment of Socialism, and yet who are not beneficiaries of the wrongs and abuses on account of which Socialism is growing, should take the beneficiaries of these wrongs by the nape of the neck and make them understand that they cannot endanger our whole social fabric by holding back the flood gates of protest until the flood has arisen that will swallow them up?

These gay brigands of the social order may calculate according to the formula of the Bourbon monarch, that this will last as long as they do, and after them the deluge. But those who do not help to store up the flood or profit by it ought to prevent in season the coming of the retribution, which will not discriminate between those who have danced and those who have just looked on.

Socialism would make little progress in this country if our present social order were freed from the abuses which are not inherent in it, but are excrescences upon it and which could be corrected if every man who did not profit by them would wake up and free his mind from prejudices which have allowed him to be misled by the cry of Socialism every time somebody protests against a robbery made respectable by the enormous amount of the loot.

There are dangers in this strike at Lawrence which men in all conditions of life ought to apprehend. Any man who is not wilfully blind can see it, but there are none so blind as those who will not see.
